The book Breaking India by Rajiv Malhotra and Aravindan Neelakandan is about the forces that are fragmenting India. While Islamic radicalism and Maoist insurgencies are two forces that are fragmenting India, Breaking India focuses on the North-South divide, as evidenced by its subtitle Western Interventions in Dravidian and Dalit Faultlines.

Half a decade of research and information gathering from multiple reliable sources has finally led to the compilation of ‘ Breaking India: Western Interventions in Dravidian and Dalit Faultlines ’ . The researchers followed the trail left behind by the business groups, which are deceiving in nature and faulty in their sole claim of ‘ good work ’ .
