While building big horsepower has become easier, putting that power down to the pavement is still quite a challenge. Getting great "bite" involves a lot more than sticky tires and a smoky burnout. The suspension system is being put to work in a way it was never designed to operate. A better understanding of exactly what is happening to the suspension when the car launches from a standing start will assist you in maximizing your car's effectiveness on the street or at the track. In How to Hook and Launch: Traction

Mods for the Street & Strip, author Dick Miller explains the physics behind what gets a car moving from a standing start, and how to best harness the various powers at work. Getting the rear tires to really bite and gain maximum traction is divided into several small steps, and Miller walks you through each phase of the launch. Today's enthusiasts face a wide range of potential traction improvements, from softer tires and basic bolt-ons to complete or partial chassis replacements. Most opt for something in-between, where some well-engineered components are chosen to replace the factory equipment and offer a greater capability and range of adjustment. It is this range of upgrades where Miller spends most of his time, explaining what the parts and pieces do, and how to use them to their highest potential.

How does this work? Everyone jokes about the ferocity of Maine winters, but driving in them is no laughing matter, which is why in order to get your driver's permit, you need to thoroughly study this: the Maine Driver's Handbook. Even if you've lived in Maine your entire life, there are probably things you don't know, and this latest version, which we pull directly from the Maine Bureau of Motor Vehicles page, contains only the very latest in laws and regulations. Once you feel comfortable with the handbook information, you can start practicing with our free Maine permit practice tests, so that you'll be prepared for the real exam. Finally, it'll be time to schedule the exam, and soon, you'll have a Maine driver's permit of your very own!
