Gendered Migrations and Global Social Reproduction National Geographic Books

First published in 1988, Africa examines the varied pattern of development in the continent, the progress and the disappointments experienced, and the prospects. This picture is set firmly within the frame of the continent's geography. From a general synthesis, the books moves to a country by country analysis of the interdependence of geography and economic development. The authors' analysis of the effects of varied development strategies in Africa leads them, in the final section, to discuss what lessons maybe learned from these earlier initiatives and to assess the changes in development policies that were later implemented. This book will be of interest to students of geography, economics and development studies.

Garth Andrew Myers' work makes a significant contribution to a long tradition of research on colonial cities and a multidisciplinary body of literature on urban legacies of colonialism. He examines both colonial rule and postcolonial inheritance in these cities, tracing the legacies of colonialism in different and divergent postcolonial settings—a revolutionary left-wing socialist state (Zanzibar) and a reactionary right-wing dictatorship (Malawi). In addition to the examination of urban plans and the African urban majority's responses to them, the book traces the experience of the urban planning process through three different "verandahs of power," or levels of class depiction: the colonial power, the colonized middle, and the urban majority. Interspersed with personal stories, this book illuminates our understanding of the workings of power in African cities by addressing human experiences of that power.

In 1964 the Lake Kariba Fisheries Research Institute (LKRFRI) was created in Kariba, Rhodesia as a United Nations Development Program Project, and executed by the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAD) in cooperation with the Governments of Rhodesia and Zambia. Dr. A. G. COCHE took charge of the Limnological Section and conducted research on the entire lake between January 1965 and January 1966. In 1966 the Central Fisheries Research Institute (CFRI) was created in Chilanga, Zambia by the Department of Wildlife, Fisheries, and National Parks. It was also supported by a UNDP Project executed by FAD. Between 1967 and 1971 Dr. E. K. BALON & Dr. A. G. COCHE were in charge of the Sections of Ichthyobiology and of Limnology respectively. The results of their FAD research activities on Lake Kariba are united in this volume. In the first part A. G. COCHE presents a limnological synthesis. In the second part E. K. BALON studies in detail the fish production and succession. The views expressed are those of the authors and do not necessarily coincide with those of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations.

The 1990 CIA World Factbook, compiled by the United States Central Intelligence Agency, is a comprehensive reference guide covering a wide range of data on countries around the world. This book provides detailed information on the geography, demographics, government, economy, and more of each nation, making it an invaluable resource for researchers, academics, and policymakers. Written in a straightforward and factual style, the Factbook is essential for anyone seeking accurate and up-to-date information on global affairs during the year 1990. The inclusion of maps, flags, and other visual aids enhances the reader's understanding of the data presented. The CIA's authority in gathering and analyzing intelligence adds credibility to the information provided in this publication. The United States Central Intelligence Agency, with its vast resources and expertise in intelligence gathering, is well-equipped to produce such a thorough and informative reference work. The agency's mission to provide national security intelligence to senior policymakers informs the content of the Factbook, ensuring it meets the highest standards of accuracy and reliability. The publication reflects the CIA's commitment to transparency and dissemination of essential information for understanding global issues. I highly recommend The 1990 CIA World Factbook to anyone interested in gaining a deeper understanding of the world's nations and their characteristics. This meticulously researched and well-organized book is a valuable tool for researchers, students, and professionals in various fields, offering a wealth of data that is crucial for informed decision-making and analysis.

Originally published in 1986, Politics and Government in African States 1960-1985 deals with the politics of sub-

Saharan African states since independence. Each chapter considers the formal structure of government at the time of independence and traces the subsequent changes. Each chapter also describes the development of the state machinery, the civil service, the parastatals, defence and police forces, party structure, the political opposition and trade unions. The economics of African states are dealt with insofar as they affect politics and government.

This publication analyses country studies into poverty dynamics over the past decade in eight African countries: Ethiopia, Ghana, Madagascar, Mauritania, Nigeria, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe. Using improved household survey data, the book provides an overview of poverty trends and considers the impact of policy reforms to promote economic growth and poverty reduction. The report highlights the importance of the following factors in the success of poverty reduction strategies in Africa: country location, as some regions have failed to benefit from economic growth due to their remoteness; the role of infrastructure, such as a viable road network; access to education and land are key private endowments in helping households to benefit from emerging economic opportunities; and the significance of social protection measures for poverty outcomes.
