OBJECTIVE BIOLOGY (VOLUME 4)

Oswaal Books and Learning Private Limited

Any theory of physical reality is like a map; not just a map, yet a map of our human perception capability, successfully navigating the idea of space through time, understanding how all of that works. It is like travelling around the world; taking photos, gaining a greater understanding of how the world works, how the world lives, and how it breathes. To achieve that as a pure theory of physics in exploring space and time, from the basis of human perception, the travelling experience there is identifying a set of successful patterns of data that have been proven experimentally through real means, as patterns of data that come together to form a fundamental property of definition for perception as a logos of reality, here as a logos of space and time. The eBook presented here accounts for such a process, detailing 18 consecutive physics papers on the subject of time and perception, and how perception holds the key in unlocking the mystery of time and space. One key logos regarding our perception with space and time is that to understand nature is to first trust it, to trust what is presented to our perception as real, and thus more fundamentally, to know our perception, to accept those fundamentals.

Yet how is “trust” a part of science, and should it be? In some ways nature like our body is like a piano; we can play anything with it, yet knowing how it works is key to getting the most out of it. And surely to get the most out of reality using our perception, our greater ability to perceive and think is certainly required for our advancement in the physical arts and sciences. This eBook is about knowing how nature works by accepting how our perception works and how perception can be used to understand the scientific here and now components of time and space. The eBook presented here is such a focus, and the hope is that it is an insightful and rewarding process of study. The utility of this eBook is to position the already freely available papers (available at <http://www.equusspace.com/index-2.htm>) in the one word/phrase search facility for immediate word/phrase index search functionality. For instance, if one wants to find which paper Avogadro’s constant was derived, it can be found by typing in “Avogadro” in the eBook document search function. If one wants to find where the fine structure constant was derived, it can be found by typing “fine structure constant” in the e-book document search function. When those results come up, each of those results will point to which of the papers that subject word/phrase arises by where it exists in the eBook. Owing to the nature of needing to keep each chapter as true to publication as the papers, hyperlinks for references are not used in the eBook yet remain the function of the individual papers themselves. The eBook is compiled as chapters representative of the sequential order of the papers as per publishing date, from chapter 1 (paper 1) to chapter 18 (paper 18). Paper 18 represents a summary of all the papers to the level of defining the fundamental and principle features of time, space, and perception; it was logical to reach paper 18 as a follow-on from papers 1-17, as a summary of the findings, namely the complete and fundamental description of time, space, and perception and their common functionality. Chapter 18 therefore is a good starting point, owing to its overview nature, if one is uncertain about the how to approach the papers. Or, if at any time one finds themselves getting lost in the reading, head to chapter 18 to get that overall heads-up overview perspective of what is ultimately sought in the papers, namely the fundamental scientific principles of time, space, and perception.

The sixth edition of the foundational reference on cognitive neuroscience, with entirely new material that covers the latest research, experimental approaches, and measurement methodologies. Each edition of this classic reference has proved to be a benchmark in the developing field of cognitive neuroscience. The sixth edition of The Cognitive Neurosciences continues to chart new directions in the study of the biological underpinnings of complex cognition—the relationship between the structural and physiological mechanisms of the nervous system and the psychological reality of the mind. It offers entirely new material, reflecting recent advances in the field, covering the latest research, experimental approaches, and measurement methodologies. This sixth edition treats such foundational topics as memory, attention, and language, as well as other areas, including computational models of cognition, reward and decision making, social neuroscience, scientific ethics, and methods advances. Over the last twenty-five years, the cognitive neurosciences have seen the development of sophisticated tools and methods, including computational approaches that generate enormous data sets. This volume deploys these exciting new instruments but also emphasizes the value of theory, behavior, observation, and other time-tested scientific habits. OBJECTIVE BIOLOGY (VOLUME 7)

Chandresh Agrawal

Before the discovery of insulin, a diagnosis of Type 1 diabetes was a death sentence. To mark the centenary of this landmark in medicine, this book charts the journey of how insulin was transformed from what one clinician called 'thick brown muck' into the very first drug to be produced using genetic engineering, and which earned the founders of US biotech company Genentech a small fortune.

Taking the reader on a fascinating journey, starting with the discovery of insulin in the 1920s through to the present day, Insulin - The Crooked Timber reveals a story of monstrous egos, toxic career rivalries, and a few unsung heroes and heroines. It discusses in detail the circumstances of Canadian scientist Frederick Banting whose award of the 1923 Nobel Prize for this life-saving discovery proved to be both a blessing and a curse for him and explores how the human story behind this discovery still remains one of ongoing political and scientific controversy. The book is the result of the author's own shocking diagnosis with Type 1 diabetes and its story reminds us all of what technology can - and cannot do - for us. As the world struggles to emerge from the COVID-19 pandemic and face future challenges such as climate change, the lessons that we can learn from
