In 1950, when he commissioned the first edition of The Armed Forces Officer, Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall told its author, S.L.A. Marshall, that "American military officers, of whatever service, should share common ground ethically and morally." In this new edition, the authors methodically explore that common ground, reflecting on the basics of the Profession of Arms, and the officer's special place and distinctive obligations within that profession and especially to the Constitution.

Public Documents of the State of Connecticut, 1914, Vol. 3 Palala Press Excerpt from Collectanea Anglo-Premonstratensia, Vol. 3: Documents Drawn From the Original Register of the Order, Now in the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and the Transcript of Another Register in the British Museum; Camden Third Series, Vol. XII At this point the itinerary fails us, except for the information that the bishop returned from London quickly to finish his visitation of the northern houses. From the documents here printed, however, we are able to see that the visitor reached Coverham, in Yorkshire, on August 14, and was at St. Agatha's on the 18th. Thence he proceeded to Newcastle, where he held a visitation of Alnwick Abbey by proxy on the 23rd of the month. Four days later he was at Blanchland, and he completed his work at Egglestone on August 30, having devoted 101 days to his task. One or two small matters concerning these visitation journeys seem worth noticing. When the bishop was compelled on his journey to stop for the night at some town or other place, as was of course often the case, his expenses were borne by the abbot of the house of the Order nearest to the place of stoppage. When, however, he remained longer for his own convenience or pleasure. The expenses were borne by the bishop himself. This was the case when, as just recorded, he remained all day at Cambridge out of reverence for the feast of St. John the Baptist. On other occasions the same procedure is recorded when the bishop turned off from his direct road to visit Walsingham and Glastonbury. The Model Rules of Professional Conduct provides an up-to-date resource for information on legal ethics. Federal, state and local courts in all jurisdictions look to the Rules for guidance in solving lawyer malpractice cases, disciplinary actions, disqualification issues, sanctions questions and much more. In this volume, black-letter Rules of Professional Conduct are followed by numbered Comments that explain each Rule's purpose and provide suggestions for its practical application. The Rules will help you identify proper conduct in a variety of given situations, review those instances where discretionary action is possible, and define the nature of the relationship between you and your clients, colleagues and the courts.
