Kenneth O'Cannaugh had no idea just how bad his life could get until life got really bad. Down on his luck, Kenneth decides to break the law. Arrested for theft, he is sent to a state prison where the worst of the worst happen to be housed-a prison built during the Civil War. Carving out a niche for himself in prison comes easy for Kenneth as he uses his financial savvy to become a financial advisor to Little Buddy, an unsavory character and head of the organization in prison. Kenneth will meet the dregs of society while heading up Little Buddy's corrupt financial system; butting heads with Ricky, a drug lord within Little Buddy's circle who has a mean method for collecting what's due him. As violence becomes an integral part of Kenneth's life, he'll use any and all resources to survive. Prison becomes his world and Kenneth is hell-bent on surviving-whatever the cost. Liam Kenealy writes a thrilling mystery filled with twisting plotlines and evil-doers that possess an authentic bada-bing attitude. This juicy novel has all the right elements and gives the reader an up-close view of the unpleasant goings-on inside prison walls. Liam Kenealy has written a trilogy of children's books and three books in the Master of Mistakes series.

Mr. Kenealy is currently writing his fourth novel in the Master series and lives in Bergland MI.

This paper discusses commodity prices might serve as a useful leading indicator of inflation, based on the relative importance of flexible auction markets for the determination of these prices. They thus may have a tendency to respond relatively quickly, especially in response to monetary disturbances. Estimation of alternative commodity-price indexes, in which the weights are chosen so as to minimize the residual variance in aggregate inflation regressions, was not fully successful. The commodity prices do have a useful role to play as an aid in predicting inflation, so long as one is careful to interpret the relationships qualitatively and in the context of more general macroeconomic developments. The ratio of consumer to commodity price movements ' changes over time, and the relative price of commodities undergoes long sustained swings; nonetheless, the qualitative linkages are quite evident in the data. Perhaps most importantly, turning points in commodity-price inflation frequently precede turning points in consumer-price inflation for the large industrial countries as a group.

"The colour of carbon matters. Green carbon is the carbon stored in plants and soil of natural ecosystems and is a vital part of the global carbon cycle. This report is the first in a series that examines the role of natural forests in the storage of carbon, the impacts of human land use activities, and the implications for climate change policy nationally and internationally. REDD (reducing emissions from deforestation and degradation) is now part of the agenda for the Bali Road Map being debated in the lead-up to the Copenhagen climate change conference in 2009. Currently, international rules are blind to the colour of carbon so that the green carbon in natural forests is not recognized, resulting in perverse outcomes including ongoing deforestation and forest degradation, and the conversion of extensive areas of land to industrial plantations. This report examines REDD policy from a green carbon scientific perspective. Subsequent reports will focus on issues concerning the carbon sequestration potential of commercially logged natural forests, methods for monitoring REDD, and the long term implications of forest policy and management for the global carbon cycle and climate change."--Provided by publisher.
