Family of Choice - TV Tropes

"Hugo" is unlike any other film Martin Scorsese has ever made, and yet possibly the closest to his heart: a big-budget, family epic in 3-D, and in some ways, a mirror of his own life. We feel a great artist has been given command of the tools and resources he needs to make a movie about — movies. That he also makes it a fable that will be fascinating for (some, not all) children is a measure ...

Hugo movie review & film summary (2011) | Roger
Ebert

Peter says every day had the same routine and it started with a 5 a.m. wake-up call. “The norm was someone would have to wake us up. And that was quite an experience, I remember, because sometimes you are tempted to sleep in a bit for a few minutes and your [houseman] would come in and pull all your sheets out and reprimand you for staying in bed after the lights have gone on,” Peter says.
