democracy in the region. In this book, Ali Gheissari and Vali Nasr look at the political history of Iran in the modern era, and offer an in-depth analysis of the prospects for democracy to flourish there. After having produced the only successful Islamist challenge to the state, a revolution, and an Islamic Republic, Iran is now poised to produce a genuine and indigenous democratic movement in the Muslim world. Democracy in Iran is neither a sudden development nor a western import, Gheissari and Nasr argue. The concept of democracy in Iran today may appear to be a reaction to authoritarianism, but it is an old idea with a complex history, one that is tightly interwoven with the main forces that have shaped Iranian society and politics, institutions, identities, and interests. Indeed, the demand for democracy first surfaced in Iran a century ago at the end of the Qajar period, and helped produce Iran's surprisingly liberal first constitution in 1906. Gheissari and Nasr seek to understand why democracy failed to grow roots and lost ground to an autocratic Iranian state. Why was democracy absent

Today Iran is once again in the headlines. Reputed to be developing nuclear weapons, the future of Iraq's next-door neighbor is a matter of grave concern both for the stability of the region and for the safety of the global community. President George W. Bush labeled it part of the "Axis of Evil," and rails against the country's authoritarian leadership. Yet as Bush trumpets the spread of democracy throughout the Middle East, few note that Iran has one of the longest-running experiences with from the ideological debates of the 1960s and 1970s? Most important, why has it now become a powerful social, political, and intellectual force? How have modernization, social change, economic growth, and the experience of the revolution converged to make this possible?

Identifying the murderer of the Chancellor of the University is not the only challenge facing physician Matthew Bartholomew. Many of his patients have been made worse by the ministrations of a 'surgeon' recently arrived from Nottingham, his sister is being rooked by the mason she has commissioned to build her husband's tomb, and his friend, Brother Michael, has been offered a Bishopric which will cause him to leave Cambridge. Brother Michael, keen to leave the University in good order, is determined that the new Chancellor will be a man of his choosing. The number of contenders putting themselves forward for election threatens to get out of control, then more deaths in mysterious circumstances make it appear that someone is taking extreme measures to manipulate the competition. With passions running high and a bold killer at large, both Bartholomew and Brother Michael fear the very future of the University is at stake.

Excerpt from Twenty-First Report of the Board of Directors and Officers of the California Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb, and the Blind: For the Twenty-Four Months Ending June 30, 1894 The principal improvement made during the last two years has been the erection of a new edifice for a boys' home. This structure was rendered necessary by the crowded Condition of the other dormitories, and by the constant increase of pupils. This edifice is now completed in all details, and at a cost within the appropriation made by the Legislature. No provision was made for furnishing this building. A few hundred dollars, remaining from the building fund, have been employed for that purpose; but a large part of the room will not be available until a further appropriation is made for the interior. The work of instruction has been prosecuted during the last two years to the great satisfaction of the Board of Directors. Classes are graduated at the close of each scholastic year, and their equipment is believed to be as good as is furnished at any similar institution in the country. There is urgent need that some further provision should be made for manual training. The limited facilities, now taxed to the utmost, are far below the requirements of the institution. The carpenter shop and the printing office are school-rooms for industrial education. The facilities in these departments ought to be greatly increased. Elementary instruction in other trades might well be embraced in plans for the future. The water supply for the institution is still a matter of grave concern. A persistent effort has been made to develop sufficient water on the grounds by means of tunnels and wells. A permanent increase of water ought to be secured to the extent of gallons daily. The water fund was long ago exhausted, and nothing further can be done in that direction until an appropriation has been made for that purpose. The amounts set forth by the Principal for the support of the institution, and for improvements during the next two years, having been carefully examined and approved by the Board of Directors, they are hereby made a part of this report. For a more detailed statement of the work of the institution, its condition and requirements, reference is made to the Principal's report, which, with the Report of the Board of Directors, is herewith respectfully submitted. He's worried about Madeline, his vanished half sister, who was last seen in the company of Jack Hurtsill, the gang's conscienceless leader. He's determined to find out what happened to Madeline—and to bring Jack to justice if she was murdered for the coin her body could earn. Beautiful, spirited Abigail Hale, daughter of the surgeon at Aldersgate School of Medicine, detests the challenging, hard-bargaining Max almost as much as Jack. Excerpt from Speech of Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, on the Compromise Bill: Delivered in the Senate on Tuesday, July 9, 1850

The birth of an individual is an event of interest and concern to society - but the existence of a political community like a State, is a matter of grave concern to other communities; and one of historical magnitude. As it affects the property and security of other States, they cannot be indifferent to the consequences of such a measure. New Mexico, in her claim to become a State without leave or license, is following in the wake of a more. Imposing predecessor, and may well claim to take refuge in her precedent. All that they have to do is to propagate the same feelings and interests which encouraged and sustained California and they are about to do this, not only in the defiance of Congress, but in violation of the rights of another State. New Mexico can then come with a perfect claim, and will come with a perfect claim if the other precedent is acted upon. And what are we required to do We are required to permit these two States to come in with just institutions as they may form, and with such boundaries as they may assume, and there can be very little doubt of what character they will be in one respect. What then do we get by this compromise California is to be extended from Oregon to Mexico, and these limits are to be preserved because slavery has been excluded from them by the constitution tendered to Congress. Gentlemen say we will not yield an inch of this for Southern settlement. It has already been appropriated under Northern institutions. On the contrary, they are willing to take from Texas as much slave territory as they can get, with a view of converting it into non-slave-holding territory, and with a view of keeping her slave-holding neighbors in good order. They say California can do without a guardian, but that New Mexico must have a helping hand. Texas is thus required to curtail her limits, while it is held as the duty of congress to maintain inviolate the present proposed limits of California. Now, that was not the opinion of some gentlemen whose notions were so peculiar when that subject was first agitated. The progress of events, however, has made wondrous changes in their minds. I say, therefore, in limine, that I cannot consent to this dangerous policy of allowing others to make States extra constitutionally, and against the securities which that instrument should afford to every part say one part more than another. Democracy in Iran Brenda Novak, Inc.

Giordano Bruno (born Filippo Bruno, 1548 – 17 February 1600) was an Italian Dominican friar, philosopher, mathematician, poet, cosmological theorist, and Hermetic occultist. He is known for his cosmological theories, which conceptually extended the then-novel Copernican model. He proposed that the stars were distant suns surrounded by their own planets, and he raised the possibility that these planets might foster life of their own, a philosophical position known as cosmic pluralism. He also insisted that the universe is infinite and could have no "centre". Starting in 1593, Bruno was tried for heresy by the Roman Inquisition on charges of denial of several core Catholic doctrines, including eternal damnation, the Trinity, the divinity of Christ, the virginity of Mary, and transubstantiation. Bruno's pantheism was also a matter of grave concern, as was his teaching of the transmigration of the soul/reincarnation. The Inquisition found him guilty, and he was burned at the stake in Rome's Campo de' Fiori in 1600. After his death, he gained considerable fame, being particularly celebrated by 19th- and early 20th-century commentators who regarded him as a martyr for science, although historians agree that his heresy trial was not a response to his astronomical views but rather a response to his philosophical and religious views. Bruno's case is still considered a landmark in the history of free thought and the emerging sciences. William Turner, American Catholic bishop

October, Nineteen Eighteen Because the disease was not definitely declared a dangerous malady until early in October, there was no record Of the number of cases which developed at the outstart. However, many Of the cases developed rapidly into pneumonia with fatal results. By the middle of September the number of cases had increased to a degree where it was clearly seen that Brockton in common with other cities was facing a general epidemic, and the increasing death list was naturally a matter of grave concern. Long before it became the slogan of the presidential campaign for Barack Obama, Dorothy Ferebee (1898 – 1980) lived by the motto “ Yes, we can. ” An African American obstetrician and civil rights activist from Washington DC, she was descended from lawyers, journalists, politicians, and a judge. At a time when African Americans faced Jim Crow segregation, desperate poverty, and lynch mobs, she advised presidents on civil rights and assisted foreign governments on public health issues. Though articulate, visionary, talented, and skillful at managing her publicity, she was also tragically flawed. Ferebee was president of the Alpha Kappa Alpha black service sorority and later became the president of the powerful National Council of Negro Women in the nascent civil rights era. She stood up to gun-toting plantation owners to bring health care to sharecroppers through her Mississippi Health Project during the Great Depression. A household name in black America for forty years, Ferebee was also the media darling of the thriving black press. Ironically, her fame and relevance faded as African Americans achieved the political power for which she had fought. In She Can Bring Us Home, Diane Kiesel tells Ferebee 's extraordinary story of struggle and personal sacrifice to a new generation.

Covering all forms of financial assistance to students gifts, loans, and work this first comprehensive book on the subject takes a hard look at what is going on in American colleges and universities. The twenty-eight original essays, written for the volume, are especially timely for two reasons: first, institutions of higher education, both public and private, have a heightened interest in institutional financial support from all sources, including that available from student tuition (and thus indirectly from student financial-aid sources); and second, state and federal agencies, especially Congress, are reviewing and revising the aid programs which they sponsor (a matter of grave concern to institutions which depend on such funds for a substantial portion of their incomes). Divided into five parts, the work covers the philosophy and history of financial aid to students in American universities and colleges, the various programs currently in force, the organization and administration of student financial assistance, professional careers open to advisors, counselors, and administrators, and an overview summing up the ideas and recommendations of the distinguished professionals who have contributed to the volume. Though addressed primarily to administrators and to students of higher education, the book should be read by policy-makers by college and university presidents and deans, by trustees, and by state and federal legislators."
