A Moment In The Sun

"A Moment in the Sun" is now, a strapping 935 pages, a sprawling U.S.A.-style novel that, something like the John Dos Passos classic, follows a group of characters in parallel tracks as they traverse the America of 1897, taking in the Yukon gold rush, the Spanish-American War in the Philippines, and the advent of movies. Like all Sayles films and novels, it's drenched in a detailed, loving awareness of time and place."

Moment in the Sun
A Moment in the Sun is a big sprawl of a novel at 955 pages
focusing on a sliver
of time at the turn of the last century, the era of the Spanish American War. At
the heart of his story is American imperialism and racism. It seems to be his intention to illuminate American traits of the past we'd easily recognize as those of today.
