Principles of Accounting is designed to meet the scope and sequence requirements of a two-semester accounting course that covers the fundamentals of financial and managerial accounting. This book is specifically designed to appeal to both accounting and non-accounting majors, exposing students to the core concepts of accounting in familiar ways to build a strong foundation that can be applied across business fields. Each chapter opens with a relatable real-life scenario for today's college student. Thoughtfully designed examples are presented throughout each chapter, allowing students to build on emerging accounting knowledge. Concepts are further reinforced through applicable connections to more detailed business processes. Students are immersed in the "why" as well as the "how" aspects of accounting in order to reinforce concepts and promote comprehension over rote memorization.

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1915 edition. Excerpt: ...purchasing for cash farm produce through traveling buyers who take always the full product of a farm--fields, tilled lands, and orchards; doing its own harvesting; sorting such produce into grades at city warehouses; packing the better grades in special packages; selling the better grades, through local and traveling salesmen, at wholesale; selling culls directly at retail; feeding the waste to hogs kept in the suburbs solely for the utilization of that waste; killing, dressing, and selling the pork. 43 Suppose that you are engaged in the manufacture of chair stock. You get some of your raw material by buying sawed lumber, some by buying logs and sawing them, some by buying trees on the stump (you do not buy the land on which they stand) and doing your own logging, shipping, sawing, etc., and some by buying land, getting off the logs, and then selling the land. Name the ledger accounts that you deem necessary for adequate accounting. How far do the other figures explain for the year 1911 the first three items? 45 You join a summer colony within easy rail communication of the city. A general organization of members of the colony controls a central club-house with grounds. The restaurant privilege is sold to outsiders. Facilities are offered to members for tennis, golf, billiards, bowling, boating, swimming. For all these privileges, fees are charged and expenses are incurred. All excess income is to be carried to a general-purpose fund. Entertainments are provided at club expense. You are chosen president of the club.
