"The "Computers Nobody Wanted" is a history of an ill-conceived acquisition, in 1969, of Xerox's entry into the computer business to its subsequent abandonment. The text discusses attempts to convert a superior scientific computer to replace Xerox' own IBM computers that were processing business applications. The author was responsible for managing these conversions against technical obstacles that could not be overcome. After spending tens of millions for technology improvements, Xerox decided to exit from the computer business. The book also traces investments in a computer workstation - the STAR computer - from conception in 1973 to its dissolution in 1984. It describes the pioneering research at the Xerox PARC (Palo Alto Research Center) and how an inspired group produced superb innovations that were of no commercial value. During this epoch Strassmann was Vice-President of Strategic Planning for the Information Products Group that was responsible for transfer of PARC results to the marketplace.

This is a how-to book for becoming a minimalist at work. More than anything, minimalism at work means working in a way that brings a sense of peace, meaning, and joy to your life. Depending on your position, there may be things that you can't change. But, there is a lot that you can do to make a difference at work. By way of a tale, this book focuses on a core set of actions that will help you adopt minimalism at work. This tale introduces you to two characters who work in the same office: Tim who feels weighed down by his job and Tina who helps Tim lighten his load through 10 practical tools. Don't worry: if your workplace isn't an office, you can still use the tools. Modify, adapt, and adjust them so that they work for you.

This book traces the journey that has been played out in homes, cabins, restaurants, hotels, culinary schools, movie trailers and all manner of venues that span the past fifty-plus years. Its roots are in the hospitality of a family farm table where homegrown food and hospitality were the catalyst of joy-filled memories. It was fine-tuned in multiple culinary schools, restaurants and travels abroad in some of the worlds' finest dining rooms. These experiences facilitate beloved memories and has continued up to this moment in time, when chef instructor Linda Hierholzer has begun to reminisce on the marvelous opportunities that have broadened and enhanced her experience of sharing the table. It is this expertise that she wishes to share with home cooks, Northwest farmer's market and food enthusiasts as follows: -Shop the market empowered by knowledge of seasonal, local, organic, free-range, grass-fed, sustainable foods. Google the "find of the day" ingredient to ensure quality. -Plan daily and weekly menus with season, variety and portions in mind. -Transport and store those perishable items to maintain quality. -Utilize the five senses as the first tool to navigate through a new recipe. -Organize prepared ingredients in a series of small bowls before approaching the method. -Equip the kitchen with proficient equipment considering their function, composition, shape and durability. -Handle a variety of knives to best prepare ingredients for optimum cooking. -Explore cooking techniques that produce flavorful dishes. -Enhance recipes by highlighting them with aromatic, colorful and tactile basic preparations. -Create a hospitable atmosphere paying detailed attention to the venue, invitation, ambiance, table accents, music, menu, service and conversation. Her world travels and chance meetings with culinary celebrities documented in the chapter called "Memorable Meals" sets the stage to play out visions of "what might be" for the enthralled reader. This book is organized in two main sections. The first section is divided into chapters that introduce the reader to the technicalities of being a savvy shopper, selecting the right tool for the right job, exploring the fundamental principles of flavor and plate development from an artistic eye view, aromatic preparations that are the foundation of a recipe and what it takes to successfully prepare and produce a dinner party. Musings from notable menus and culinary travels inspires the reader to create their own memorable meals. Unique, compared to most cookbooks, is the creation of a taste, think, transform mentality of approaching recipes, turning a robotic cook into a critical thinking, renovating food explorer. The second section of the book is comprised of one-hundred-twenty Skagit Valley, Mediterranean and Latino eclectic recipes divided into starters, breads and spreads, soups, salads, brunch or supper, pasta mains, vegetable mains, seafood entrées, poultry entrées, meat entrées, sides, sweets and appareils (recipes used within several other recipes.) Each recipe has a memorable head note that introduces either the history, stories, quotes, memory, seasonality, cuisine of origin, serving suggestions and/or interesting facts. Side bars give ingredient substitutions, where to find unusual ingredients, etymology and cultural facts vital to the integrity of the dish. After a fast-food dark age, the art of the hospitable table has re-emerged. Farmers' markets and Community Supported Agriculture home baskets are inspiring a new age of wholesome food experimentation. Mediterranean cuisine has proven to be a nutritionally sound way to maintain good health. There is a yearning to explore the fundamentals of what it means to be sharing the table and how to successfully achieve this art in a sustainable, healthy way. This book offers answers to this trending desire.

Sharing the Table

Seb Doubinsky was born in Paris and spent part of his childhood in the USA, an experience that indelibly marked him for life. He currently lives in Denmark with his wife and children. He writes fluently in both French and English and has published more than a dozen novels that blur the boundaries between literary fiction, science fiction and crime fiction, and a volume of short stories. His poetry has been published around the world to great acclaim and has been collected in at least nine stand-alone volumes. He edits the bi-lingual on-line literary magazine Le Zaporogue, publishes books under his Les Editions du Zaporogue imprint and is at work on at least one new novel. This unique anthology is a testament to a unique individual. Scottish writer and editor Chris Kelso has commissioned contributions from nineteen writers and artists, all of them admirers, friends and colleagues of Seb Doubinsky, who have each paid tribute to him in their own way for the pleasure his work, friendship and encouragement have given them.

A Clinical Psychologist with a life long problem with his weight looks at the science and practice of what he describes as the "best diet on the planet." Diagnosed in 2007 with angina he was put on a high carb diet by his hospital but rapidly put on weight. When he looked at the 'science' behind the hospital diet he found standard of the investigations to be very poor and he found it was not supported by what good science there was. The truth he says was the exact opposite of what he and millions of others had been told. " No one diet suits everyone but in terms of weight loss and its beneficial effect on health, low carb leaves the others behind.
