This brutally honest, open, and real love story, wrapped around research, unfolds over four decades. Full of surprises, heartaches, and joy, it sheds light on the innermost feelings of a family coming to grips with autism. But there is more to this story. Jimmy's doctors, pastors, friends, and countless others share their insights as well. While this family's journey is full of challenges, it's far from tragic. And in each chapter, bits of new research show that this family is not at all unique. Like many affected by autism, family members struggle to cope and bounce back, and eventually learn to come together and do what they can to change the world in which they live; a world that can be misinformed and judgmental. As one reviewer wrote, "the book and Jimmy give hope that autistic individuals and their families cannot only survive, they can thrive." Dr. Bucher, with his remarkable family, does more than share his family's experiences. He deftly illustrates their innermost feelings; he draws me into their world. This book should not only be read by parents and educators of children with autism, it should be read by anyone who has the desire to truly understand the joys and the challenges faced by families affected by autism. The Buchers exemplify the journey faced by all such families."--Bill Moss, Executive Director of The Linwood Center (see www.linwoodcenter.org) "When I was little, people would ask me about my family and whether I had any brothers or sisters. I would answer, 'I have a mommy, a daddy, a sister, and a Jimmy.' I said this because he is not your everyday brother who picks on you and puts gum in your hair. He buys me presents and gives me hugs and kisses, and when I was little he sang to me.'--the sister (Suzy)

As budgets tighten for school districts, a sound understanding of just how teaching and administration translate into student learning becomes increasingly important. Rebecca Barr, a researcher of classroom instruction and reading skill development, and Robert Dreeben, a sociologist of education who analyzes the structure of organizations, combine their expertise to explore the social organization of schools and classrooms, the division of labor, and the allocation of key resources. Viewing schools as part of a social organization with a hierarchy of levels—district, school, classroom, instructional group, and students—avoids the common pitfalls of lumping together any and all possible influences on student learning without regard to the actual processes of the classroom. Barr and Dreeben systematically explain how instructional groups originate, form, and change over time. Focusing on first grade reading instruction, their study shows that individual reading aptitude actually has little direct relation to group reading achievement and virtually none to the coverage of reading materials once the mean aptitude of groups is taken into consideration. Individual aptitude, they argue, is rather the basis on which teachers form reading groups that are given different instructional treatment. It is these differences in group treatment, they contend, that explain substantial differences in learning curricular material.

There is a growing sense of crisis in rural ways of life, which manifests itself in economic decline, depopulation, depleted environments, and a crisis of rural identities. Crime is one potent marker of crisis, the more so as it spoils the image of healthy, cohesive community. The social reaction it elicits, the policing of this 'other rural', is also a guide to the dimensions of crisis. The social sciences have witnessed a renewed international interest in the study of 'other rurals': the neglected, invisible or excluded aspects of country life. This book brings a fresh approach to the study of crime that challenges the urban-centric assumptions of much western criminology and sociology. It explores rural crime and social reactions to it, in relation to processes and patterns of community formation and change in rural Australia, including the social, economic, cultural and political forces shaping the history, structure and everyday life of rural communities. Policing the Rural Crisis is based on five years of extensive original empirical research in rural and regional Australia. It draws on ideas and debates in contemporary social theory across several disciplines, making the analysis relevant to the study of crime and social change elsewhere. Developed by pioneering British MD Dr. Natasha Campbell-McBride, who provides the book's Foreword, Gut and Psychology Syndrome (GAPS) refers to disorders, including ADD/ADHD, autism, addictions, depression, and obsessive-compulsive disorder, stemming from or exacerbated by leaky gut and dysbiosis. GAPS also refers to chronic gut-related physical conditions, including celiac disease, rheumatoid arthritis, diabetes type one, and Crohn's disease, as well as asthma, eczema, allergies, thyroid disorders, and more. An evolution of the Specific Carbohydrate Diet, the GAPS Diet will appeal to followers of the Paleo Diet, who are still struggling for optimum health, as well as anyone interested in the health benefits of fermentation or the Weston A. Price approach to nutrition. The authors offer encouraging, real-life perspectives on the life-changing improvements to the health of their families by following this challenging, but powerful, diet. The GAPS Diet is designed to restore the balance between beneficial and pathogenic intestinal bacteria and seal the gut through the elimination of grains, processed foods, and refined sugars and the carefully sequenced reintroduction of nutrient-dense foods, including bone broths, raw cultured dairy, certain fermented vegetables, organic pastured eggs, organ meats, and more. The Heal Your Gut Cookbook is a must-have if you are following the GAPS Diet, considering the GAPS Diet, or simply looking to improve your digestive health and—by extension—your physical and mental well-being.

For more than twenty years, David Piscuskas and Juergen Riehm, principals of 1100 Architect, have worked toward a refined architecture that captures the spirit of early modernism and translates traditional sensibilities of harmony, composition, and precision into a contemporary context. The firm's designs do not adhere to any specific stylistic codes but do have a recognizable, yet understated architectural signature: an elegance of proportion, a subtle mix of colors, meticulous details and craftsmanship. Each project shown in this volume, the first monograph on the work of 1100, exemplifies that signature. Presented with exquisite color photographs, working drawings, models, and sketches, the designs range from apartments and houses (many for clients in the worlds of art, fashion, and theater) to retail and art-related spaces, including the Robert Mapplethorpe Foundation, TSE, J.Crew, and Metro Pictures, all in New York. Paralleling the diverse visual material, the rich and layered text epitomizes the nature of Piscuskas and Riehm's partnership, simultaneously exploring the relationship between the architects and their architecture, the literal and the abstract, the tactile and the visual.

My Journey We've all got a few demons inside us, Some that walk beside us, Some that fight us, They all try to find us, Some to control us and ride us, But we're the ones that are riding, Down this path, Who begin slipping and gliding, It's frightening when we become blinded and can't see a way out, I couldn't find him, The boy that I used to call Ed, He led me into the dark, Made me temporarily dead, Now his temper is dead, And so is he, So, goodbyes must be said, I won't cry, But my head is leaking, My thoughts keep on seeping, Into these poems, Some obvious, Some discretely, Some slowly, Some quickly, Some funny, Some sick themes, Because what I went through was sickening, I'll start with topics that are rather dark, Suicidal thoughts, Self-harm, One broken heart, Delusions about noughts, Anger that's calm, And all the other things that left marks, Both physical and mental, I was typically mental, I became temperamental, And my temper became mental, Only calmed by instrumentals, My Instagram went mental, Posting pics in the shower, Retweeting anything and everything for hours, I'd forgotten I was a coward, But it took all of this for me to blossom and flower, I thought I had powers, And thought I could wow crowds, But today will I wow crowds, With a poem about dark clouds, And drugs, And violence, And everything violet, That colour kept me silent, Brought me peace, I couldn't fight it, Now I write and like it, And type things, About how life felt when I was psychotic, That's my new topic, Why? Because I can't top it, In the summer of 2016, I couldn't stop it, My brain was moving faster than a 214-ton rocket, But I still don't want to crop it out, Because why would I want that to happen, It gives me something to talk about, Helps me with my rapping, Helps me find my passion, That I know I'm not lacking, Because I wasn't acting, I was simply extracting, Everything negative that I was attacking, So my mind began battling, It was baffling, But to tell you the end of this little story, It's not like the rest it's actually quite boring, But it's beautiful like the scars that used to be sore, And the things that distressed me that now give me glory, Like my book, Just look, And you'll see someone who took, All the pain that they felt, Rearranged it and shook, It around until it looked, Something like the person you see today, Who can finally say, I'm more than just...
