I like E.J. and his alter ego Jeff so was really looking forward to jumping back into one of his books. An Uninvited Ghost is the second in the Haunted Guesthouse series and it was every bit as good as the first. Alison, along with her 10-year-old daughter, are running a guesthouse (NOT a B&B, she doesn't cook so no food is served).

The Uninvited is a first-rate ghost story about a secret this solitary, palatial house has, and it creates its suspense with things like creaking doors, lights faintly moving, wind blowing windows in(or out), barely audible whispers floating in the air, and ethereal images casting their ghostly shadows for the living's visual consumption.

If you could sum up An Uninvited Ghost in three words, what would they be? Funny Ghostly Mystery. The story is hilarious. The interplay between Alison and the cop, Alison and her mother and daughter, and Alison and Maxi will have you in stitches. The mystery is real and the story has a surprise ending that I did not see coming.
