“ Most mornings I get away, slip out the door before light, set forth on the dim, gray road, letting my feet find a cadence that softly carries me on. Nobody is up—all alone my journey begins. Some ” William

Stafford, but let me explain.
For a 15 year period I didn't write any poetry and barely read any collections. The one collection I did read and really love was The Long Song The Wind Makes by William Stafford.
