Young retiree, Matty Cruz, is beginning to feel at home in Couper, Washington, a tree-filled city nestled on the banks of the Columbia River—which also happens to have the highest violent-crime rate in the Pacific Northwest. In the third book of the completed Matty Cruz Adventure series, Matty has learned to handle herself in her new, more dangerous environment, and she's even made a friend or two—kind of—and adopted a dog. Still, something is missing from her new life—a true friend. So she's delighted when Carol Karuso moves into the neighborhood. But as they get to know one another, Matty discovers that the beautiful redhead has left a trail of deceased paramours in her wake. The logical thing to do would be to back away from her new friend, but can Matty desert someone who might be the unluckiest woman she's ever met?

Our Land and Land Policy Zondervan

Carol Karuso is making sweeping changes to her life. She's finally divorcing a husband that refuses to stay dead, and she's giving up all hope of becoming a private investigator. Time to move on. Then her best friend, Matty Cruz, returns unexpectedly to Couper, Washington. During her short stint in Europe, she's somehow managed to get on the bad side of the Albanian Mafia and she needs a place to hide. Ah, Matty, You can take the woman out of Couper ... Carol does her best, but Matty refuses to lie low. Instead she starts digging into the shady practices of a retirement home and pushes Carol to partner with an arrogant private detective in search of a woman that promises love to many a lonely, old man, but, instead, empties their bank accounts. If you fancy thrilling mysteries, especially those that include a beautiful, redheaded detective with bad habits but endless determination, colorful characters, dark villains, and more than a dash of humor, murder and mayhem, you'll love this final book. Astray in Couper R.Marquez

Matty Cruz Adventures 1,2,3 is composed of the first three books in the series. The interlocking novellas detail Matty's first few months in Couper, Washington, a tree-filled city nestled on the banks of the Columbia River—which also happens to have the highest violent-crime rate in the Pacific Northwest. Astray in Couper not only tells the story of how Matty Cruz ends up in Couper as a young retiree, but how an abandoned dog leads to her first brush with the dark side of Couper. Killer in Couper introduces charming but questionable Sam Bester and tells the story of how he and Matty team together to solve a murder. Redhead in Couper is the story of how Matty becomes best friends with Carol Karuso, a beautiful redhead from Texas with a tragic but sinister past.

The Innocents Abroad R.Marquez

Read the heartwarming conclusion to the six-part Matty Cruz Adventure series. Dispirited Matty Cruz is approaching her first year anniversary in Couper, Washington, a tree-filled city nestled on the banks of the Columbia River—which also happens to have the highest violent-crime rate in the Pacific Northwest. In the sixth and final book of the series, Matty Cruz goes to Mexico with her brother, Ricardo, to look for the dying father who left them when they were babies. Will they be able to reunite with him and not reveal his location to the government agent who is watching them? Carol Karuso is off to Texas to uncover the secrets kept from her for twenty years. Will she survive a visit to her home town, and does she have what it takes to track down the truth? Sam Bester is left in Couper, Washington to nurse his wounds and his regrets. Afraid that Matty will never forgive him for his lies and treachery, he wonders what he should do, or go, next. When the three meet again, will it only be to say good-bye? female amateur sleuth, fun humorous mystery suspense series, Pacific Northwest, cozy, woman protagonist, thriller, contemporary woman

For the past three decades, many history professors have allowed their biases to distort the way America's past is taught. These intellectuals have searched for instances of racism, sexism, and bigotry in our history while downplaying the greatness of America's patriots and the achievements of "dead white men." As a result, more emphasis is placed on Harriet Tubman than on George Washington; more about the internment of Japanese Americans during World War II than about D-Day or Iwo Jima; more on the dangers we faced from Joseph McCarthy than those we faced from Josef Stalin. A Patriot's History of the United States corrects those doctrinaire biases. In this groundbreaking book, America's discovery, founding, and development are reexamined with an appreciation for the elements of public virtue, personal liberty, and private property that make this nation uniquely successful. This book offers a long-overdue acknowledgment of America's true and proud history.

Couper, Washington, nestled on the banks of the Columbia River, is a lovely place to visit, but living there can be killer. When Matty Cruz's career ends prematurely due to hard economic times, she pulls up stakes and relocates to the tree-filled Pacific Northwest. She's hoping the natural beauty there will lift her spirits. But soon she discovers that her impulsive move lands her in a city with one of the highest violent-crime rates in the region. Matty Cruz Adventures holds the first three stories of this cozy mystery series with a criminal edge, but the stories are told with a dash of humor and fun. If you like a smart, brave heroine who must quickly reinvent herself—or else, quirky, colorful characters, and dark villains, you'll love R. Marquez's slightly skewed version of the Pacific Northwest. Buy Matty Cruz Adventures today, and read how Matty survives a city that too many psychopaths love to call home. female amateur sleuth, fun humorous mystery suspense series, Pacific Northwest, cozy, woman protagonist, thriller, contemporary woman

Hollywood died on me as soon as I got here. Welles said that, not me, but damn if he didn't nail it, you know? Sam Bateman came to Hollywood to settle a score, but amidst the sunny and 75, his plans went astray. Everything changed the day he drank in the intoxicating legend of Meyer Holden, the greatest screenwriter Hollywood has ever known, the one who pulled a Salinger and walked away. Holden now tacks pseudonyms onto his works and buries them in the bottomless sea of spec that is Hollywood's development process. They're out there for anyone to find—but at what cost? In his quest, Bateman severs all ties and sinks into a maddening world of bad writing and flawed screenplays. Paranoid and obsessive, the belligerent savant encounters an eccentric cast of characters—each with an agenda—in his search for the one writer in Hollywood who does not want to be found. Phil Brody's The Holden Age of Hollywood is at once a detective novel, an unexpected love story, and a provocative exposé of a broken industry. With dark humor and incisive commentary, the novel immerses readers in a neo-noir quest to attain the Hollywood dream, integrity intact.

What is the reality of policing in the United States? Do the police keep anyone safe and secure other than the very wealthy? How do recent police killings of young black people in the United States fit into the historical and global context of anti-blackness? This collection of reports and essays (the first collaboration between Truthout and Haymarket Books) explores police violence against black, brown, indigenous and other marginalized communities, miscarriages of justice, and failures of token accountability and reform measures. It also makes a compelling and provocative argument against calling the police. Contributions cover a broad range of issues including the killing by police of black men and women, police violence against Latino and indigenous communities, law enforcement's treatment of pregnant people and those with mental illness, and the impact of racist police violence on parenting, as well as specific stories such as a Detroit police conspiracy to slap murder convictions on young black men using police informant and the failure of Chicago's much-touted Independent Police Review Authority, the body supposedly responsible for investigating police misconduct. The title Who Do You Serve, Who Do You Protect? is no mere provocation: the book also explores alternatives for keeping communities safe. Contributors include William C. Anderson, Candice Bernd, Aaron Cantú, Thandi Chimurenga, Ejeris Dixon, Adam Hudson, Victoria Law, Mike Ludwig, Sarah Macaraeg, and Roberto Rodriguez.

The Story of Seville Createspace Independent Publishing Platform
Technology and increasing levels of education have exposed people to more information than ever before. These societal gains, however, have also helped fuel a surge in narcissistic and misguided intellectual egalitarianism that has crippled informed debates on any number of issues. Today, everyone knows everything: with only a quick trip through WebMD or Wikipedia, average citizens believe themselves to be on an equal intellectual footing with doctors and diplomats. All voices, even the most ridiculous, demand to be taken with equal seriousness, and any claim to the contrary is dismissed as undemocratic elitism. Tom Nichols' The Death of Expertise shows how this rejection of experts has occurred: the openness of the internet, the emergence of a customer satisfaction model in higher education, and the transformation of the news industry into a 24-hour entertainment machine, among other reasons. Paradoxically, the increasingly democratic dissemination of information, rather than producing an educated public, has instead created an army of ill-informed and angry citizens who denounce intellectual achievement. When ordinary citizens believe that no one knows more than anyone else, democratic institutions themselves are in danger of falling either to populism or to technocracy or, in the worst case, a combination of both. An update to the 2017 breakout hit, the paperback edition of The Death of Expertise provides a new foreword to cover the alarming exacerbation of these trends in the aftermath of Donald Trump's election. Judging from events on the ground since it first published, The Death of Expertise issues a warning about the stability and survival of modern democracy in the Information Age that is even more important today.

Matty Cruz, a young retiree, needs an activity to keep her occupied in her new hometown of Couper, Washington, a tree-filled city nestled on the banks of the Columbia River—which also happens to have the highest violent-crime rate in the Pacific Northwest. In the second book of the completed Matty Cruz Adventure series, Police Detective Phil Bester has just the job for her. His older brother, Sam, is in trouble with the law, and Phil can't help him. Knowing that she's a natural when it comes to getting people to talk, he recruits her to question people who live near the crime scene. Charming Sam Bester talks Matty into letting him tag along as she investigates. Unfortunately, every clue they discover points to him being the murderer, and the closer they get to the truth, the more Matty begins to wonder whether she's being set up as the next victim on the murderer's hit list.
