There has been much public praise for the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation’s efforts to reform public education. However, few scholars have engaged substantively and critically with the organization’s work. While the Gates Foundation is the single largest supporter by far of "choice" initiatives particularly with regard to charter school formation, it is pushing public school privatization through a wide array of initiatives and in conjunction with a number of other foundations. What are the implications for a public system as control over educational policy and priority is concentrated under one of the richest people on the planet in ways that foster de-unionization and teacher de-skilling while homogenizing school models and curriculum? The Gates Foundation and the Future of US "Public" Schools addresses this crucial, unanswered question while investigating the relationships between the Gates Foundation and other think tanks, government, and corporate institutions.

Creating a College is a collection of President Volpes annual addresses on the state of the College of Staten Island. They constitute a history of the early years of the College, which was established in 1976 by the merger of an upper division institution, Richmond College and Staten Island Community College. The fiscal collapse of New York City in 1975 led to the unification of the two City University of New York institutions on Staten Island. The complex process of merging two disparate institutions, with differing missions and educational philosophies at two locations, miles apart, during a period of severe fiscal constraint is recorded in these eighteen addresses. Such a merger has been a rare occurrence in American higher education. Its end result was the creation of a new type of institution, the comprehensive college.

In the United States, some populations suffer from far greater disparities in health than others. Those disparities are caused not only by fundamental differences in health status across segments of the population, but also because of inequities in factors that impact health status, so-called determinants of health. Only part of an individual's health status depends on his or her behavior and choice; community-wide problems like poverty, unemployment, poor education, inadequate housing, poor public transportation, interpersonal violence, and decaying neighborhoods also contribute to health inequities, as well as the historic and ongoing interplay of structures, policies, and norms that shape lives. When these factors are not optimal in a community, it does not mean they are intractable: such inequities can be mitigated by social policies that can shape health in powerful ways. Communities in Action: Pathways to Health Equity seeks to delineate the causes of and the solutions to health inequities in the United States. This report focuses on what communities can do to promote health equity, what actions are needed by the many and varied stakeholders that are part of communities or support them, as well as the root causes and structural barriers that need to be overcome.

Sustainable development is still seen by authorities as an abstract concept. Local Environmental Auditing will help put it into practice. The book provides a comprehensive guide to monitoring the state of the local environment and establishing the impacts of local actions on global issues, and shows how current local authority policy and practice can be adapted to recognize environmental priorities. The authors provide both a guide to and an assessment of the subject: they link the processes with the issues, with specific information on carrying out the audit (including checklists, case studies and standards) and a detailed discussion of the issues and choices which local authorities may face. Clearly structured and accessible, this will be an essential handbook, both for local government departments and other local organizations, and students in a wide range of subjects, including environmental science and health, town planning, urban and rural studies, social science and politics.

Taking pix of your support will get this historic moment to launch. With millions of people demanding it - a Global Government founded on pure democracy, fairness, equity, justice and liberty for all - there will no longer be any need for war, poverty, jealousy, hate-mongering, racism, pessimism and withdrawal. Print and SIGN Today.It's urgent that you immediately get your copy of this Global Constitution and share it with all of your friends and associates. Humans are on the verge of the greatest catastrophe in the total evolution of life on Earth and so if you do nothing, you will become known as a contributor to the demise of all life on Earth. If you are looking to do something that could halt and even reverse our headlong crash as a civilization, you must read and fully appreciate the world's first attempt to save all human life and all other life on this planet. Extinction is forever. If you are a fan of our Mother Earth - you must learn more.The Global Constitution is the world's first attempt to create a basic set of international rules and regulations that all governments around the world would be forced to obey. All existing international organizations were setup by the five most powerful countries in terms of their military might. These organizations cannot therefore impose the kind of discipline over all member nations because the founding nations are really dictating terms to the rest of the world and so the current attempts to create an International system of governance that can equitably and fairly enforce the rules are foolish and are actually counter-productive. The Global Constitution you are about to read is based on the principles of Freedom, Justice and Equality that the people of only a few nations enjoy. This is the first known attempt to present a Global legal platform to grant the freedoms we all aspire to having more of and present that platform to the world in such a way that it can be debated and eventually adopted by all civilized nations of planet Earth - before it's too late. Over the last few years we have seen the increase of dictatorial powers becoming the De-Facto form of government even as national Constitutions and other traditions have prohibited the concentration of political power on the few or the elite. We have also seen the need for a uniform system of laws throughout the world in order to prevent mass chaos that appears to be spreading around the world like a plague. We currently see the need for more democratic actions, and to counter-act dictatorial decisions, in nations like China, Russia, the European Union, India, and even in the United States, yet we see no way to impose a more fair and just system on all the nations of the world with one stroke of the pen. A Global Constitution is the only way to grant our basic inalienable rights, freedoms, liberty and justice to enough people in time to save the planet from its current path towards almost certain destruction, all made possible by incompetent, inept and corrupt forms of government in existence all around the world today.Our political leaders all over the world pretend that they are all about giving the world or their region a real democracy. But, they do not to ever intend to do that. They are all lying to us about that and the reason is that the minute that we achieve a Real Democracy, especially one that can be completely conducted over the Internet, we will never require their services any longer. AND more importantly, they would no longer be in a position to steal billions of dollars from their own people, nor to threaten Global Thermonuclear War every time they get their knickers in a twist about some perceived insult from another national leader. Each proposes that doctrinal and systematic theology should be re-cast in the light of postmodernity. No longer can Christian theology be foundational, or have a stable metaphysical and epistemological framework. Vanhoozer advocates a theo-dramatic reconstruction of Christian doctrine, replacing the timeless propositions of the purely cerebral theology of the Reformed tradition in favor of a theology that does justice to the polyphony of multiple biblical genres. Franke holds that theology is part of a three-way conversation between Scripture, tradition, and culture, with an uncertain outcome. This study shows that each of these proposals is based on misunderstanding and exaggeration, and that the case against foundationalism is unclear and unpersuasive. It is argued that Vanhoozer's appeal to revelation as divine speech-acts is not as radical as he thinks, and his epistemology is weak. In the hands of postmodernity, Christian theology abandons its exactness and the standards of care that are a notable feature of doctrinal constrictions. The book will be of importance to those with interest in Reformed theology or Christian theology more generally. It provides a clear assessment of the impact of the postmodern mindset on theology.
