The Czech king and Roman Emperor Charles IV met with the French king Charles Vin Paris in 1378. The author describes with intelectual brilliance and narrative talent the journey from Prague to Paris as a step by step journey reportage using contemporary French chronicles and vast mediévistic literature as well as many beautiful illustrations. The result is an appealing account on mediéval life, everyday and intelectual, mentality, grand European politics of the time or even mediéval cuisine. The first part of the book presents the well-known facts of Charles IV life (brought up in Paris, his father s John Luxemburg s political and representational activities, his international goals, etc.). The middle part of the book brings a transcription of richly illustrated French chronicles. The third part analyses the importance of the meeting of the two most powerful European rulers of the time. Final and most original part consists of individual studies concerning practical organisation of mediéval festivities, its logistic, transport, or culinary details, the court manners, relationships and symbolics. mahel draws from latest knowledge and methods from archeology and microhistory to cultural anthropology or iconography. This as a highly readable account of mediéval time inspiring in its originality for expert historians as well as appealing to the general public. "
