Throughout Bad Boy, Myers struggles to strike a balance between his desire to belong to a community and his fear of being defined by that community. As a teenager in particular, Myers hopes to use his writing and reading as a way to distance himself from his blackness; although he appreciates many things about the black community, he sees it as incompatible with the kind of intellectual life he wants to lead, and is afraid of becoming an anonymous part of the "army of black laborers ...

After all Walter Dean Myer did not finish high school. But he did what one teacher advised him to do, and that was to "NEVER STOP WRITING." As Walter said on page 200 of BAD BOY, "My reading ability led me to books, which led me to ideas, which led me to more books and more ideas. The slow dance through the ideas led me to writing."
