The Beatles were an English rock band formed in Liverpool in 1960. With a line-up comprising John Lennon, Paul McCartney, George Harrison and Ringo Starr, they are often regarded as the most influential band of all time. The group were integral to the evolution of popular music as an art form and to the development of the counterculture of the 1960s. ...

The demo of 'Something' has already appeared on Anthology 3 of course, although this is a different mix. Talking of which, very little Abbey Road related material from Anthology 3 has been repeated here - 'Something' (along with Paul's demo for 'Come and Get It') is the exception rather than the rule. So for example, take 1 of 'Because' features in the new Abbey Road sets ...

The 'A Hard Day's Night' opening chord - The Beatles Bible

Speaking with GQ in 2018, Paul McCartney explained this song's origin story: "A Day In The Life" was a song that John had started. He had the first verse, and this often happened: one of us would have a little bit of an idea and instead of sitting down and sweating it, we'd just bring it to the other one and kind of finish it together, because you could ping-pong - you'd get an idea.

Session musicians. Although strings were commonly used on pop recordings, George Martin's suggestion that a string quartet be used for the recording of "Yesterday" marked a major departure for the Beatles. McCartney recalled playing it to the other Beatles and Starr saying it did not make sense to have drums on the track and Lennon and Harrison saying there was no point having extra guitars.
