In Black Pain: It Just Looks Like We 're Not Hurting, Terrie M. Williams exposes, in an honest and grounded approach, many of the ways in which cultural narratives shape perceptions, treatment, and expectations of Black people and the coping mechanisms Black people often employ to deal with diminished personhood perpetuated by the experience of being Black in America. I'm so sorry, Irene, but I don't remember the paint colors! I'm about 99% sure we used semigloss paint straight off the shelf for the white, and the black was a porch and floor paint by Sherwin Williams. It might have been Tricorn Black, but I'm afraid I don't remember the color name for sure.

"Black Pain is an immensely readable and down-to-earth book. It will motivate black people who suffer with depression in silence to seek help. This book shines a bright light on the darkness of despair" - Alvin F. Poussaint, MD, Professor of Psychiatry, Harvard Medical School

She likes Sherwin-Williams' Black of Night (SW 6993) and Greenblack (SW 6994). Walls must be prepped to ultra-smooth, because black, reflecting light as it does, announces every paint drip and drywall dent. A flat finish produces a higher-end look, although doors, doorframes and window frames can be glossy.

I will usually decide if I want the black to be highlighted blue or grey.
Then I wash a dark shade of color with black wash. This will often blend a dark grey into a shadow of Black, while leaving slight edge highlights. Grey looks more like worn and dusty black, while Dark blue looks more like shiny/smooth black.

I've bought some Ronseal Tudor Black Oak fence paint and was going to do the fence in that , the shed will be re done white , there will be wooden decking and the grass of course will be tidy. I thought some budget black rattan lounging furniture would look good with palm plants, neutral colours , maybe a splash of sky blue and orange in some cushions.
