Brave New World Quotes by Aldous Huxley - Goodreads

The horror of Brave New World lies in its depiction of human beings as machines, manufactured on assembly lines and continuously monitored for quality assurance. John, the "savage" from New Mexico, initially seems to represent a kind of pure human being, one whose naturalness contrasts with the mechanization of the World State.

Brave New World Chapter 2 Questions | English Flashcards ...

Sacrifice is an important test of values in Brave New World. We can be certain, at the end of the day, that Helmholtz is serious about writing because of what he is willing to sacrifice for it. John validates his own principles in his willingness to die for them. Mustapha, on the other hand, defends a different value altogether — that of happiness. Bernard, it would seem, is willing to sacrifice nothing, and so he remains unsatisfied in the civilized world.
