GRIN Verlag

This dissertation's three research papers examine issues relevant to younger breast cancer survivors and their health care providers. Research Paper I is an exploratory, qualitative study to investigate breast cancer survivors' experiences with breastfeeding (N=11). Research Paper II is a nested case-control study to evaluate physical and mental health differences among women who had a child after breast cancer compared to those who did not (N=81). Research Paper III is a cohort study evaluating the association between long-term depressive symptoms and post-diagnosis reproductive concerns (N=131). All three studies include participants diagnosed with early stage breast cancer at age 40 or younger who participated in the Women's Healthy Eating and Living (WHEL) study (N=3088), a multiyear randomized trial of a dietary intervention. Research Paper I includes a purposeful sample of 11 survivors who had a child after treatment ended. We conducted open-ended semi-structured interviews and used cross-case inductive analysis to identify themes. Ten of 11 participants initiated breastfeeding. The main themes were: 1) Cautiously hopeful, 2) Exhausting to rely on one breast, 3) Motivated despite challenges, 4) Support and lack of support, and 5) Encouraging to others. Participants were motivated to breastfeed but faced significant challenges, largely due to a reliance on one lactating breast. Research Paper II is a nested case-control study involving 81 WHEL participants, 27 cases who had a child after cancer and 54 controls who did not (matched on age and stage at diagnosis). This study explores a selection bias indicating that cancer survivors who become pregnant are a self-selected healthier group. After controlling for covariates in a multilevel model, physical health was not different between groups but mental health was marginally higher among cases, meeting a level of clinical significance. Research Paper III is a cohort study involving 131 WHEL participants who participated in a continuation survivorship study. This study investigates whether recalled concerns about reproduction after breast cancer treatment are associated with long-term depressive symptoms, monitored at up to 6 time-points. Multi-level modeling identified higher reproductive concerns as an independent predictor of consistent depressive symptoms after controlling for both social support and physical health.

This text is a concise handbook designed to assist the clinician in the implementation of Accelerated Partial Breast Irradiation (APBI). It includes a review of the principles that underlie APBI, a practical and detailed description of each technique for APBI, a review of current clinical results of APBI, and a review of the incidence and management of treatment related complications. The book encompasses a number of different techniques and approaches that include brachytherapy, intraoperative, and external beam techniques. There is currently no single source that describes these techniques and their clinical implementation.

Research Paper

(postgraduate) from

the subject

Medicine - Public

Health, grade: 1,

language: English,

abstract: Breast

cancer is posing

serious threats to women, although men

have also been found to suffer

from breast cancer.

Therefore, this paper will provide an overview of

breast cancer

disease. It will also answer the research question: Does women carrying cell phones in their bras increase their chances of breast cancer, making breast cancer more frequent in younger women? Breast cancer has been presenting diverse trends for decades and its increased prevalence in young women has raised concern among scientists. In practice, breast cancer is characterized by the growth of tumor cells in the breast tissue. Breast cancer is believed to have claimed many human lives in the past four decades, but its prevalence has decreased significantly due to improved disease awareness and treatment. Additionally, the observed decrease in cancer prevalence rate is also attributed to effective breast cancer screening that has enabled healthcare professionals to detect breast cancer cells at the early stages of the disease onset. Recent medical data show that about 230, 480 women in the U.S have invasive breast cancer. Further medical reports show that 57, 650 women have developed non-invasive breast cancer. Consequently, it is estimated that the prevalence rate of breast cancer has reached 13 percent, and this has made the number of breast cancer survivors in the U.S to reach 2.5 million individuals. Ductal breast cancer has been identified to be the most prevalent with a prevalence rate of 80% while lobular cancer comes second with 15% prevalence rate. Other types of breast cancers such as inflammatory breast cancer, medullary cancer and angiosarcoma account for 5% of all breast cancer cases.

It has been recognized for almost 200 years that certain families seem to inherit cancer. It is only in the past decade, however, that molecular genetics and epidemiology have combined to define the role of inheritance in cancer more clearly, and to identify some of the genes involved. The causative genes can be tracked through cancer-prone families via genetic linkage and positional cloning. Several of the genes discovered have subsequently been proved to play critical roles in normal growth and development. There are also implications for the families themselves in terms of genetic testing with its attendant dilemmas, if it is not clear that useful action will result. The chapters in The Genetics of Cancer illustrate what has already been achieved and take a critical look at the future directions of this research and its potential clinical applications.

---

Despite recent advances in adjuvant therapies of cancer, the regimens of postoperative adjuvant chemotherapy treatment which are presently available fail to cure the majority of cancer patients. Preoperative (neoadjuvant) chemotherapy represents a new approach in drug scheduling, based on sound theoretical, pharmacokinetic, and experimental principles. The preoperative timing of chemotherapy before definitive surgery is not a minor change in the therapy of cancer. To be successful, large numbers of practitioners and their patients must participate. Substantial alterations of many aspects of the present management of cancer will have to follow. Therefore, before such therapy can be fully and routinely implemented, results of the novel treatment and its rationale have to be carefully evaluated. In preoperative treatment, other features will likely gain importance. For the first time, clinicians have a chance to follow the in vivo response of the tumor exposed to preoperative chemotherapy. The subsequent histological assessment of the tumor sample may likely become an important prognostic guide, permitting more refined individual approaches to the planning of postoperative adjuvant treatment. The value of such a treatment strategy can already be appreciated in the clinical setting, as seen from the therapy of osteosarcoma. Furthermore, preoperative chemotherapy might render previously inoperable tumors operable and hence resectable with a curative intention. The preoperative reduction of tumor bulk may also effectively decrease the need for more radical operations, permitting a more uniform adoption of conservative surgery.

This book provides the reader with up-to-date information on important advances in the understanding of breast cancer and innovative approaches to its management. Current and emerging perspectives on genetics, biology, and prevention are first discussed in depth, and individual sections are then devoted to pathology, imaging, oncological surgery, plastic and reconstructive surgery, medical oncology, and radiotherapy. In each case the focus is on the most recent progress and/or state of the art therapies and techniques. Further topics to receive detailed consideration include particular conditions requiring multidisciplinary approaches, the investigation of new drugs and immunological encouragement. Patient agents, lifestyle and psychological aspects, and biostatistics and informatics. The book will be an excellent reference for practitioners, interns and residents in medical oncology, oncologic surgery, radiotherapy, pathology, and human genetics, researchers, and advanced medical students.

This contributed book covers all aspects concerning the clinical scenario of breast cancer in young women, providing physicians with the latest information on the topic. Young women are a special subset of patients whose care requires dedicated expertise. The book, written and edited by internationally recognized experts who have been directly involved in the international consensus guidelines for breast cancer in young women, pays particular attention to how the disease and its planned treatment can be effectively communicated to young patients. Highly informative and carefully structured, it provides both theoretical and practice-oriented insight for practitioners and professionals involved in the different phases of treatment, from diagnosis to intervention, to follow-up - without neglecting the important role played by prevention.
