Fat-Tailed Scorpion Tucson : University of Arizona Press

The founders and forerunners of the Southern Baptist Convention were fundamentally shaped by the thought of Puritan theologian Jonathan Edwards and his theological successors. While Baptists in the antebellum South boasted a different theological pedigree than Presbyterians or Congregationalists, and while they inhabited a Southern landscape unfamiliar to the bustling cities and tall forests of New England, they believed their similarities with Edwards far outweighed their differences. Like Edwards, these Baptists were revivalistic, Calvinistic, loosely confessional, and committed to practical divinity. In these four things, Southern Edwardseanism lived, moved, and had its being. In the nineteenth-century, when so many Presbyterians scoffed at Edwards's "innovation" and Methodists scorned his Calvinism, Baptists found in Edwards a man after their own heart. By 1845, at the first Southern Baptist Convention, Southern Edwardseans had laid the groundwork for a convention marked by the theology of Jonathan Edwards.

Hot SEAL, Independence Day Amherst : University of Massachusetts Press

At the beginning of her breakdown the intervals between intelligent consciousness and insanity had been long. She was herself, or was able to keep herself fairly in hand, the greater part of the time, and chaos, when it came, lasted only for a few days or weeks. Recently this condition had been reversed. She had lost knowledge of time, but she felt that centuries must have passed since those last flying, blessed hours when she knew herself at least for what she was. She grasped now at her returning reason, with a desperate, shuddering little moan, which she quickly stifled.

From earliest childhood Idjhil knew that he was destined to be a leader of his people. As his father and grandfather taught him traditional hunting skills, he savored the joys and challenges of living a Nyungar way of life in the bush that was his home. Secure and content, Idjhil was unaware that his life was about to change forever. Idjhil is the moving story of a Western Australian Aboriginal boy who, at the age of nine, is taken from his family in accordance with the official government policy of the time. Although written as fiction, it is based on the memories and experiences of people still alive today. It won a Western Australian Premier's Book Award in 1996.

This collection is designed to supplement the major texts of tagmemics, to show developments and changes in the theory since its appearance. Major developments include: the use of matrix type analysis; the addition of roles (i.e. case relationships) to previously-delineated grammatical functions; sentence, paragraph and discourse levels; the interrelationship of grammar and lexicon. These essays apply the theory of tagmemics to all kinds of semantic problems, and illustrate how uses of the theory have been expanded by scholars, some in areas not strictly linguistic in nature.

Navy SEAL who wants nothing to do with commitment, is forced to protect his neighbor and her unborn baby when her past comes calling. Jack "Mars" Marsten lives in an apartment he never made a home. He made the mistake of marrying right out of boot camp to his high school sweetheart. When his wife left him during BUDS training, he vowed never to marry again. No entanglements. Period. Deirdre Anne Tyler is running from her ex-boyfriend who beat her when he found out she was pregnant. She changed her name to Anne Smith and is hiding in an apartment next door to a cranky Navy SEAL who barely says hello. Which is just as well. The fewer people who know her and where she is, the less chance of her ex finding her. Until he does... When trouble comes calling, Anne hides in her neighbor's apartment. Jack wants nothing to do with the woman but can't send her back to deal with her problem on her own. Stuck with the woman, he's now responsible for keeping her alive until her baby is born. How hard could that be? Harder than he originally thought when he finds himself falling for the pretty mother-to-be. No-commitment Jack sinks deeper into his own kind of trouble where Anne is concerned. the pretty mother-to-be. No-commitment Jack sinks deeper into his own kind of trouble where Anne is concerned.

Gombe the duck catcher goes out each day to catch a duck for his family's dinner. He does this by tying a loop into the end of a rope. When the duck steps into it, Gombei pulls it tight and the duck is caught. His friends ridicule him. They tell him that his father and grandfather used to catch many more ducks each day than just one, but Gombei tells them they had bigger families with more mouths to feed. But when it snows one morning, Gombei realises that he can save himself having to go out in bad weather by catching a hundred ducks! So he makes a hundred rope traps, a hundred ducks walk into them and Gombei is very pleased with himself. Until a noise frightens the ducks and they all take flight - with Gombei still holding onto the ropes! High up in the air he lets go and as he falls something strange happens: Gombei grows a beak, feathers and wings. He lands back on the ground as a duck - and when a hunter traps him, Gombei yells out to tell him that he is not a duck - he's a man. The hunter thinks hes hearing things and bolts away in fright. And Gombei is free. As he finds himself turning back into a man, he resolves never to catch ducks for food again.
