The relationship between the living arrangements of older people and the demand for and type of housing, the quantity and types of social services, informal support and care, life satisfaction, subjective well-being, and place of death is well-documented. There is a great gender difference. Some studies have examined factors that are associated with living arrangements and overall transitions in terms of resources (e.g., residence, marital status, caregiving resources, socioeconomic status) and needs (e.g., care due to declined physical, cognitive, and emotional functioning). Yet, there is no study that has examined transitions into and out of each type of living arrangement and investigated how long the Chinese elderly are expected to stay in each type of living arrangement for the rest of their lives.

Determining the expected years that will be spent in different living arrangements takes on a unique urgency as China prepares for unprecedented numbers of senior citizens, with ever fewer numbers of adult children to care for them.

Expected years spent in various living arrangements will help policy makers prepare for the housing and care needs of China's burgeoning elderly population. By utilizing the multi-state life table method and examining the first three waves of the Chinese Longitudinal Healthy Longevity Survey (CLHLS) from 1998 to 2002, this study aims to investigate gender differences in dynamic transitions in living arrangements and expected years spent in each type of living arrangement for the Chinese oldest-old. Seven categories of living arrangements are distinguished and analyzed: Living alone; living with a spouse only; living with children (two generational families); living with grandchildren (skipped-generation households); living with children, grandchildren, and/or great grandchildren; living with others; and living in institutions. Our results show that men of age 80 have an average life expectancy of 5.94 years, and can expect to spend 0.83 of a year living alone, 1.15 years living with a spouse only, 0.90 of a year living with children in two-generation families, 0.41 of a year living in skipped-generation families, 2.49 years living in multigenerational households, 0.06 of a year living with others, and 0.10 of a year living in institutions. The corresponding percentages of years spent in the seven living arrangements are 14.0%, 19.3%, 15.1%, 6.9%, 41.9%, 1.0%, and 1.8%, respectively. Women, on the other hand, have an average life expectancy of 7.37 years at age 80, and can expect to live in the aforementioned living arrangements for 1.37, 0.41, 1.42, 0.36, 3.60, 0.06, and 0.14 years with the corresponding percentages of 18.6%, 5.6%, 19.3%, 4.9%, 48.9%, 0.8%, and 1.9% respectively. Gender differential patterns in transitions and expected years spent in seven living arrangements by urban/rural residence, ethnicity, socioeconomic status, marital status, number of living children, disability, and cognitive function are also discussed.

The unforgettable memoir of a woman at the front lines of the civil rights movement—a harrowing account of black life in the rural South and a powerful affirmation of one person's ability to affect change. “ Anne Moody ’ s autobiography is an eloquent, moving testimonial to her courage. ” —Chicago Tribune Born to a poor couple who were tenant farmers on a plantation in Mississippi, Anne Moody lived through some of the most dangerous days of the pre-civil rights era in the South. The week before she began high school came the news of Emmet Till ’ s lynching. Before then, she had “ known the fear of hunger, hell, and the Devil. But now there was . . . the fear of being killed just because I was black. ” In that moment was born the passion for freedom and justice that would change her life. A straight-A student who realized her dream of going to college when she won a basketball scholarship, she finally dared to join the NAACP in her junior year. Through the NAACP and later through CORE and SNCC, she experienced firsthand the demonstrations and sit-ins that were the mainstay of the civil rights movement—and the arrests and jailings, the shotguns, fire hoses, police dogs, billy clubs, and deadly force that were used to destroy it. A deeply personal story but also a portrait of a turning point in our nation ’ s destiny, this autobiography lets us see history in the making, through the eyes of one of the footsoldiers in the civil rights movement. Praise for Coming of Age in Mississippi “ A history of our time, seen from the bottom up, through the eyes of someone who decided for herself that things had to be changed . . . a timely reminder that we cannot now relax. ” —Senator Edward Kennedy, The New York Times Book Review “ Something is new here . . . rural southern black life begins to speak. It hits the page like a natural force, crude and undeniable and, against all principles of beauty, beautiful. ” —The Nation “ Engrossing, sensitive, beautiful . . . so candid, so honest, and so touching, as to make it virtually impossible to put down. ” —San Francisco Sun-Reporter Something Wicked This Way Comes Dell Published by OpenStax College, U.S. History covers the breadth of the chronological history of the United States and also provides the necessary depth to ensure the course is manageable for instructors and students alike. U.S. History is designed to meet the scope and sequence requirements of most courses. The authors introduce key forces and major developments that together form the American experience, with particular attention paid to considering issues of race, class and gender. The text provides a balanced approach to U.S. history, considering the people, events and ideas that have shaped the United States from both the top down (politics, economics, diplomacy) and bottom up (eyewitness accounts, lived experience). The Bible and Attila the Hun A&C Black Brandon/Hill suggests this classic text both for an initial purchase and as essential for the minimal core collection. The ninth edition, edited by Braverman (Boston U. School of Medicine) and Utiger (Harvard Medical School) presents revised and updated material, with 81 chapters grouped into nine sections. Among the chapter topics are genomic and nongenomic actions of thyroid hormones, chronic autoimmune thyroiditis, genetic defects causing hypothyroidism, subclinical hypothyroidism, subclinical thyrotoxicosis, and thyroid disease during pregnancy. Several topics merit multiple chapters, including hypothyroidism in infants and children, carcinoma of follicular epithelium, Graves' disease, and thyrotropin. Each chapter is signed and concludes with a lengthy bibliography. Annotation : 2005 Book News, Inc., Portland, OR (booknews.com). Werner & Ingbar's the Thyroid Vladimir Djambov Quantum chemistry is simulating atomistic systems according to the laws of quantum mechanics, and such simulations are essential for our understanding of the world and for technological progress. Machine learning revolutionizes quantum chemistry by increasing simulation speed and accuracy and obtaining new insights. However, for nonspecialists, learning about this vast field is a formidable challenge. Quantum Chemistry in the Age of Machine Learning covers this exciting field in detail, ranging from basic concepts to comprehensive methodological details to providing detailed codes and hands-on tutorials. Such an approach helps readers get a quick overview of existing techniques and provides an opportunity to learn the intricacies and inner workings of state-of-the-art methods. The book describes the underlying concepts of machine learning and quantum chemistry, machine learning potentials and learning of other quantum chemical properties, machine learning-improved quantum chemical methods, analysis of Big Data from simulations, and materials design with machine learning. Drawing on the expertise of a team of specialist contributors, this book serves as a valuable guide for both aspiring beginners and specialists in this exciting field. Compiles advances of machine learning in quantum chemistry across different areas into a single resource Provides insights into the underlying concepts of machine learning techniques that are relevant to quantum chemistry Describes, in detail, the current state-of-the-art machine learning-based methods in quantum chemistry Chapter 25 Irving Risch The Model Rules of Professional Conduct provides an up-to-date resource for information on legal ethics. Federal, state and local courts in all jurisdictions look to the Rules for guidance in solving lawyer malpractice cases, disciplinary actions, disqualification issues, sanctions questions and much more. In this volume, black-letter Rules of Professional Conduct are followed by numbered Comments that explain each Rule's purpose and provide suggestions for its practical application. The Rules will help you identify proper conduct in a variety of given situations, review those instances where discretionary action is possible, and define the nature of the relationship between you and your clients, colleagues and the courts. The Wonderful Dharma Lotus Flower Sutra OUP Oxford A searing novel of social realism, Upton Sinclair's

The Jungle follows the fortunes of Jurgis Rudkus, an immigrant who finds in the stockyards of turn-of-the-century Chicago a ruthless system that degrades and impoverishes him, and an industry whose filthy practices contaminate the meat it processes. From the stench of the killing-beds to the horrors of the fertilizer-works, the appalling conditions in which Jurgis works are described in intense detail by an author bent on social reform. So powerful was the book's message that it caught the eye of President Theodore Roosevelt and led to changes to the food hygiene laws. In his Introduction to this new edition, Russ Castronovo highlights the aesthetic concerns that were central to Sinclair's aspirations, examining the relationship between history and historical fiction, and between the documentary impulse and literary narrative. As he examines the book's disputed status as novel (it is propaganda or literature?), he reveals why Sinclair's message-driven fiction has relevance to literary and historical matters today, now more than a hundred years after the novel first appeared in print.

a beating heart. Love and sex and dreams, art and drugs and the madness of youth. Betrayal and heartbreak, regret and pain, the melancholy of age. Katerina, the explosive new novel by America's most controversial writer, is a sweeping love story alternating between 1992 Paris and Los Angeles in 2018. At its center are a young writer and a young model on the verge of fame, both reckless, impulsive, addicted, and deeply in love. Twenty-five years later, the writer is rich, famous, and numb, and he wants to drive his car into a tree, when he receives an anonymous message that draws him back to the life, and possibly the love, he abandoned years prior. Written in the same percussive, propulsive, dazzling, breathtaking style as A Million Little Pieces, Katerina echoes and complements that most controversial of memoirs, and plays with the same issues of fiction and reality that created, nearly destroyed, and then recreated James Frey in the American imagination.

A coming-of-age classic, acclaimed by critics, beloved by readers of all ages, taught in schools and universities alike, and translated around the world—from the winner of the 2019 PEN/Nabokov Award for Achievement in International Literature. The House on Mango Street is the remarkable story of Esperanza Cordero, a young Latina girl growing up in Chicago, inventing for herself who and what she will become.
