centers on
Mick
"Crocodile"

Dundee , a rugged, hard-nosed Aussie outbacker who can fend off a killer croc and a few hours later throw down a keg's worth of beer at the local pub. Dundee's life-saving machismo impresses traveling New York reporter Sue Charlton (Linda Kozlowski). After Dundee saves her from a crocodile's jaws, she invites him to return to Manhattan with her to see if the big, bad city is any less dangerous than the bush.

A lot of bloodless to fairly bloodless shooting and boxing. A man draws his pistol, and shoots another man in the head. The camera, however, changes view just as we hear the gunshot, and it turns back just to see the killed man collapse dead onto the floor. We see a tribal man eating the head of a dead animal, but there is no visible blood.

| Common Sense Media Actor and director Alec Wilson is probably best remembered for his roles in Crocodile Dundee II and Crocodile Dundee in Los Angeles. Wilson played the character Denning, in the second Dundee film that came out in 1988. Weirdly enough, in Crocodile Dundee II, he played one of the bad guys.
