Sunrise Over Fallujah Introduction | Shmoop

Walter Dean Myers has written Sunrise Over Fallujah in the first-person, limited-omniscient perspective of Birdy. One reason the author chose this perspective is that the novel deals with Birdy's own story about his experiences in the Iraq War. There is no one better to tell this story than Birdy. The novel is told in limited-omniscient perspective because Birdy is not always aware of an event at the same moment that it is occurring.
