The DCT is in fact quicker shifting than a manual trans, and in the //M3 it results in quicker acceleration. My bottom line - get the manual trans while they still make them. This could be one of the last //M3s that will have a true manual trans.

M3 Manual is 3.85 M3 DCT is 3.15 If yours is regular auto your have bolted ring anyway so you have more after-market options (cheaper at least) to most manual guys who have welded ring. If you go with 3.15 you will have longer gears, higher top speed but slower acceleration. E9x M3 DCT vs.

Another vote for DCT. I was manual for the first 20 years of driving, would never have even considered an auto before the E92. To the extent I refused to buy a CSL purely down the gearbox, even though everything else about it was 100% perfect. Settled for the regular E46 M3 in the end. That was 10 years ago, when CSL's were £25k!
