Review of systems -
Wikipedia
The review of systems is distinct. For example, if the documentation read, “ The patient states she has a sore throat,” credit would not be given to both the HPI location and to the review of the ENT system. But if the documentation specifies, “ The patient states that she has a sore throat. She denies any postnasal drip or fullness in her ears when she swallows,” there is a distinct component of both the HPI and a separate ENT system review.

Documentation
Clinical Examples. The Review of Systems (ROS) is an inventory of specific body systems performed by the physician in the process of taking a history from the patient. The ROS is designed to bring out clinical symptoms which the patient may have overlooked or forgotten. In theory, the ROS may illuminate the diagnosis by eliciting information which the patient may not perceive as being important enough to mention to the physician.

For example: if the documentation reads 'patient states that her hip has been painful' credit is not given in both the HPI 'location' and to the (MS) review of systems." It goes on to explain that if the patient's complaint is followed by "no other MS issues" than it can be counted in the ROS as well as the HPI.
