I met Keegan when I was on the beach in Florida. He literally crashed into my world. I wasn't looking for romance, but his two-dimpled charm made my heart go haywire. Bonjour, my name is André Chevalier. It has been my joy and my great honor to help those who have lost their way. Not long after I began my journey, I met two such wounded souls. Renata Koreman, my little mouse. She came to me as a child-shy, mute, injured... broken. It took oh-so many years to start to bring her back to herself! Yet, I could not fully heal her. Years later, Grant Wilkinson, he too fell into my hands. The ex-Army Ranger was badly disfigured and saw himself as a monster. Isolated by secrets, solitary and self-contained, his colleagues affectionately named him 'Frosty.' Yet, how should one behave when besieged by a lifetime of confusion and guilt? The moment I saw him, I thought of her and I wondered. The eyes, they cannot always see clearly. And the heart? Ah, the heart can only guess at the truth. So it was that I remained uncertain. Idioms are what we idiots tell ourselves to make us feel better. They're all lies. Truth sets you free. Ha. Justice is blind. Hardly. Life ends when you die. Wrong! All's fair in love and war. Fine. I'll give you that one. But you'd be wise to remember Fate isn't fair, kind, or gentle. How do I know? I almost died. I say almost because a moment before my last breath, Judgment found me. I don't know what he saw in me but with one kiss, he changed me irrevocably. My name is Dahlia. I am fate. No, I am definitely not fair.*Please note this is a reverse harem and the authors suggests you always read the forward in their books. Warning, this is a standalone tale with a fierce and feisty heroine, three heroes who are forces of nature, and a tale as old as time, humor, and a little bit of karmic justice thrown in.
