Novelistic Traditions is the most comprehensive treatment of the subject to date. In scope, the book encompasses the genesis of the Arabic novel in the second half of the nineteenth century and its development to the present in every Arabic-speaking country and in Arab immigrant destinations on six continents. Editor Waïl S. Hassan and his contributors describe a novelistic phenomenon which has pre-modern roots, stretching centuries back within the Arabic cultural tradition, and branching outward geographically and linguistically to every Arab country and to Arab writing in world. The first of three innovative dimensions of this Handbook consists of examining the ways in which the Arabic novel emerged out of a syncretic merger between Arabic and European forms and techniques, rather than being a simple importation of the latter and rejection of the former, as early critics of the Arabic novel claimed. The second involves mapping the novel geographically as it took root in every Arab country, developing into often distinct though overlapping and interconnected local traditions. Finally, the Handbook concerns the multilingual character of the novel in the Arab world and by Arab immigrants and their descendants around the world, both in Arabic and in at least a dozen other languages. The Oxford Handbook of Arab Novelistic Traditions reflects the current status of research in the broad field of Arab novelistic traditions and signals toward new directions of inquiry. Colonial Trauma Routledge

Colonial Trauma is a path-breaking account of the psychosocial effects of colonial domination. Following the work of Frantz Fanon, Lazali draws on historical materials as well as her own clinical experience as a psychoanalyst to shed new light on the ways in which the history of colonization leaves its traces on contemporary postcolonial selves. Lazali found that many of her patients experienced difficulties that can only be explained as the effects of “colonial trauma” dating from the French colonization of Algeria and the postcolonial period. Many French feel weighed down by a colonial history that they are aware of but which they have not experienced directly. Many Algerians are traumatized by the way that the French colonial state imposed new names on people and the land, thereby severing the links with community, history, and genealogy and contributing to feelings of loss, abandonment, and injustice. Only by reconstructing this history and uncovering its consequences can we understand the impact of colonization and give individuals the tools to come to terms with their past. By demonstrating the power of psychoanalysis to illuminate the subjective dimension of colonial domination, this book will be of great interest to anyone concerned with the long-term consequences of colonization and its aftermath.

African Literature as a Shared Experience : Selected Proceedings from the 1977 African Literature Association Meeting Oxford ; New York : Oxford University Press

Depuis les premiers liens entre les tribus juives d'Arabie et le Prophète Muhammad jusqu'aux récents conflits du Proche-Orient, en passant par les civilisations de Bagdad et de Cordoue, sans oublier l'Empire ottoman, le monde perse et même l'espace européen, les relations tour à tour fécondes ou tumultueuses entre juifs et musulmans sont ici exposées et analysées en toute impartialité. Quelque cent vingt auteurs de tous les pays ont participé à cette encyclopédie unique en son genre, dans un esprit d'interdisciplinarité qui permet de rendre compte des multiples facettes du sujet. Les difficultés du temps présent se trouvent ainsi réinterprétées à la lumière d'une histoire resituée dans la longue durée. Un ouvrage de référence richement illustré, à la fois clair et accessible, qui constitue un outil précieux pour une meilleure compréhension entre les cultures.

Journeys Through the French African Novel

This volume reflects one of the new areas of English Studies as it broadens to take in non-western literatures, and places more emphasis on the contexts and broader notions of 'writing'. In discussing writing from and about Africa, this collection touches on studies in black writing, colonialism and imperialism and cultural development in the third world. It begins by providing a historical introduction to the main regional traditions, and then builds on this to discuss major issues, such as oral tradition, the significance of 'literature' as a western import,

The Maghreb (Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia) has been inhabited for millennia by a heterogeneous populace. However, in the wake of World War II, when independence movements began to gain momentum in these French colonies, the dominant national discourses attempted to define national identities by exclusion. One rallying cry from the 1930s was "Islam is my religion, Arabic is my language, Algeria is my fatherland." In this incisive postcolonial study, Jarrod Hayes uses literary analysis to examine how Francophone novelists from the Maghreb engaged in a diametric nation-building project. Their works imagined a diverse nation peopled by those who were excluded by the dominant political discourses, especially those who did not conform to traditional sexual norms. By incorporating representations of marginal sexualities, sexual dissidence, and gender insubordination, Maghrebian novelists imagined an anticolonial struggle that would result in sexual liberation and envisioned nations that could be defined and developed inclusively. Was der ahnungslose Student Ryad bei seinem Ferienjob in Algier vorfindet, ist ein geschichtsträchtiger, einzigartiger Ort: In der Buchhandlung, die er ausräumen soll, wirkte einst Edmond Charlot (1915 – 2004), der hier 1936 mit Les Vraies Richesses ein blühendes Zentrum der Büchergründete, Bibliothek, Verlag und Treffpunkt in einem. Charlot entdeckte Albert Camus, Jules Roy und weitere literarische Größen des 20. Jahrhunderts. Während des Zweiten Weltkriegs galt er als "der Verleger des freien Frankreichs", namhafte Autorinnen und Autoren gingen bei ihm ein und aus. Trotz politischem Druck, einer Inhaftierung unter dem Vichy-Regime und kriegsbedingtem Papiermangel engagierte er sich unermüdlich für die Literatur. Nach Kriegsende wirkte er in Paris, wo er bald in finanzielle Not geriet und seine Autoren an die grossen Verlage verlor. Doch den Buchladen in Algier gibt es bis heute. Der jungen algerischen Autorin gelingt mit ihrem preisgekrönten Roman eine Hommage an die Literatur und einen herausragenden Förderer. Lebensnah und einfach skizziert sie in einem fiktiven Tagebuch Edmond Charlots bewegtes Leben. Sie erzählt zudem von einem politisch und kulturell engverwobenen und gleichzeitig zerrissenen Mittelmeerraum in einer turbulenten Zeit. Und sie schlägt den Bogen in die Gegenwart, wo Charlots Welt der Literatur neu zu entdecken ist. Ausgezeichnet

?This honest man, this good man, this man who never did wrong to anyone, who devoted his life to the public good, and who was one of the greatest writers in Algeria, has been murdered. . . . Not by accident, not by mistake, but called by his name and killed with preference.? So wrote Germaine Tillion in Le Monde shortly after Mouloud Feraoun's assassination by a right wing French terrorist group, the Organisation Armée

Secr_ete, just three days before the official cease-fire ended Algeria's eight-year battle for independence from France. However, not even the gunmen of the OAS could prevent Feraoun's journal from being published. Journal, 1955-1962 appeared posthumously in French in 1962 and remains the single most important account of everyday life in Algeria during decolonization. Feraoun was one of Algeria's leading writers. He was a friend of Albert Camus, Emmanuel Robl_s, Pierre Bourdieu, and other French and North African intellectuals. A committed teacher, he had dedicated his life to preparing Algeria's youth for a better future. As a Muslim and Kabyle writer, his reflections on the war in Algeria afford penetrating insights into the nuances of Algerian nationalism, as well as into complex aspects of intellectual, colonial, and national identity. Feraoun's Journal captures the heartbreak of a writer profoundly aware of the social and political turmoil of the time. This classic account, now available in English, should be read by anyone interested in the history of European colonialism and the tragedies of contemporary Algeria. the Francophone literary world. It explores the work of important classic and contemporary African writers from the 1950s to the present who, until recently, have received little critical attention. The contributors view their subjects from a diverse range of critical perspectives -- historical, thematic, psychoanalytic, feminist and post-colonial -- to provide a variety of theoretically sophisticated analyses of Francophone writing. A comprehensive introduction and an extensive chronological table are included. African Francophone literature is rapidly becoming a major discipline in universities in Britain and North America. This book will provide much needed critical material for students at both undergraduate and postgraduate level. [Well-known authors studied in this book include: Chraïbi, Memmi and Boudjedra in the Maghreb; Sembène, Kourouma and Adiaffi in sub-Saharan Africa; Begag and Cherif from the 'Beur' community; and women writers such as Debèche, Fall and Bâ.]
