Brussels is all of these . . .

but it is more. It is Bruges. And it is Ghent. And it is Antwerp and Liege. And Mons. And Tournai. Because Brussels is also a hub, a base for short day excursions, a metropolis so centrally located that the lures and attractions of a dozen other great cities are also the attractions of remarkable Brussels.

Life moves faster in Ghent, an important port and industrial center, and it compensates for its less precious appearance with a vigorous social and cultural scene. This magnificent old city at the confluence of the Leie (Lys) and Scheldt (Schelde) rivers, 48km (30 miles) northwest of Brussels and 46km (28 miles) southeast of Bruges, has always been a pivotal point for Flanders.
