Gamespace is where and how we live today. It is everywhere and nowhere: the main chance, the best shot, the big leagues, the only game in town. In a world thus configured, McKenzie Wark contends, digital computer games are the emergent cultural form of the times. Where others argue obsessively over violence in games, Wark approaches them as a utopian version of the world in which we actually live.

Writer, theorist and educator McKenzie Wark writes in 2019's Capital is Dead: "reduced to nothing but users, and our actions forced into the commodity form, our collective work and play produces a world over and against us...collective human labor made a world for a ruling class that keeps making not only itself but us in its image." Can we see technology as a social and psychic apparatus—that the two are dependent on one another?
