Learning The Law Glanville Williams

Glanville Williams: Learning the Law is an inconspicuous looking text: being small enough to fit neatly into a coat, suit jacket pocket or handbag. It is neatly split into fourteen chapters: the divisions of law; the European dimension, the mechanisms of scholarship; methods of study; technical terms; case law technique; the interpretation of statutes; working out problems; answering essay questions; in the examination room; moots and mock trials; legal research; from learning to earning ...

A story circulated that Glanville had written the first edition of Learning the Law in the space of 48 hours. At the great risk of spoiling a good story, I ventured to ask him if this were true, and he replied that it was — he had, of course, collected the material over may years, but the actual writing had taken him a weekend.
