New Year's resolution is an overused word, and we have rarely seen success in it. Somehow in our heart we all know that new year is full of possibilities, and it has the potential to bring drastic positive changes in our lives. But we do not know how. Can there be a way to really understand the concept of New Year's resolution? Can someone present a powerful, but simple technique to create the right New Year's resolution? The next big challenge is about the execution. Even if we have created the right New Year's resolution, it is rarely executed. It means that the expected outcomes from the resolutions are not achieved. People after repeated failures either stop making the New Year's resolutions, or make it only for fun. It is a missed opportunity, which has the potential to transform our lives completely. The objective of this book is to create champions in the concept of New Year's resolutions and direct the energy and resources of the readers in the right direction so that they can achieve the expected results from their New Year's resolutions. We have discussed powerful ideas and effective techniques to support people in unleashing the power from their New Year's resolution. If the readers sincerely follow the techniques and the steps specified in the book, then they can transform their New Year's resolution into a big opportunity, which is full of possibilities and hope. Readers workbook attached with the chapters of the book to facilitate the development of their New Year's resolution, its evaluation, and execution. We are sure that after completion of this book the readers will have powerful tools at their disposal to bring the desired changes in their lives, to become more successful, satisfied, and happy.

" Section 165(d) of the Dodd-Frank Wall Street Reform and Consumer Protection Act requires bank holding companies with $50 billion or more in total assets and nonbank financial companies designated by the Financial Stability Oversight Council for supervision by the Federal Reserve to prepare plans for their rapid and orderly resolution under the Code. In 2011, the regulators issued a rule to require companies to annually file a resolution plan. If they jointly found a plan was not credible, the company could be subject to more stringent requirements. GAO was asked to review the regulators' programs for assessing resolution plans. This report examines each regulator's review processes, the progress made in assessing plans, and stakeholder views on the usefulness of the plans. GAO analyzed FDIC's and the Federal Reserve's policies and procedures, documentation of plan reviews, guidance and feedback provided to companies, and public plans. GAO also interviewed the regulators, a judgmental sample of 25 companies (18 percent of all companies required to file a plan) based on assets, and a variety of market participants and academics based on their expertise, experience working with companies, or use of public plans. Excerpt from Speech of Hon. W. S. Oldham, of Texas, on the Resolutions of the State of Texas, Concerning Peace, Reconstruction and Independence: In the Confederate States Senate, January 30, 1865 The third resolution asserts a fact, which our enemies seem not to understand, arid many of us 'seem to have ignored. We are not engaged rn a war for the preservation of slave property, brrrt to preserve the freedom and sovereignty of the States, to maintain and vindicate our right of self-government 111,1egard to our domestic affairs and local institutions. {the slavery question, in the manner in which it stands in this contest between the North and the South, involves an issue vastly more important than any mere question of property. It involves the question of State sovereignty; the power of the Federal Government, to prescribe the domestic institutions of a State, as 11 ell as the constitutional power of that government by arms, to coerce a State into obedience to its mandates. Six of the States of this Confederation refused to secede from the United States upon the abstract question of slavery, as presented in the Chicago convention and endorsed by Lincoln's election, nor did they do so until 11 was made upon the seven States which had seceded. To force them back into the Union. This simple fact ought to be sufficient to satisfy our enemy, our own people, and the world, that we are not fighting upon a mere issue of property, but, to preserve our freedom and sovereignty, without which, all else is valueless. Excerpt from Popular Government, Vol. 16: September-October 1949

The question of home rule was before Congress early this spring when the legislators considered and approved an amendment to the new rent control bill which gives to local units of governments the power to de-control rents. The so-called home rule provision outlined three ways in which communities may end federal controls. The Governor of a state may notify the Housing Expediter that his state will replace federal rent controls with adequate state controls, in which case federal controls will end on the date that state control becomes effective. So far no state has taken advantage of this opportunity. The Housing Expediter will end federal rent controls in a state 15 days after notification of passage of a state law declaring that federal rent control is no longer necessary in that state. Only the Nebraska legislature has voted for statewide de-control of rents. Four states - Iowa, Tennessee, Oklahoma and North Carolina - have turned down de-control bills. The governing body of a city, town or village may find, after a public hearing, that rent control is no longer necessary in their community. If their resultant resolution is approved by the Governor, controls in that area will be lifted. This has been the most popular method of de-control, 16 cities and towns mainly in the south and southwest having used it. Eleven cities have submitted resolutions which Governors are still considering, and the resolution of one town, in Virginia, has been vetoed by Governor Tuck. The chairman. Mr. Pic. Amara. From the district attorney's office, has come here and stated that the attorney-general has asked him to appear on behalf of the attorney-general's Office. Mr. McNamara. Mr. Chairman, perhaps I should explain that I am not connected with the attorney-general's Office. I am assistant United States attorney for the District of Columbia, and at the request of the attorney-general I have been assigned to appear here. Not especially in the interest of Doctor White or in the interest of the hospital, but simply to see that whatever interest the Government may have in this matter may be conserved. In other words, I hold no partisan brief, and the Government is equally interested with the committee in having the actual facts brought out. And a solution of soda ash is used. The cooking operation 18 carried on from 10 to 16 hours, at the end of which time the stock is washed, bleached, and run into drainers, as in the first method described, with the same time requirements. The loss of fiber due to this process is from 20 to 40 per cent and is less than the first method, due to a decrease in both temperature and pressure. As well as a decrease in strength of chemicals used. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com. Every session the leadership of the General Assembly encourages the members to introduce their local bills early, in order to permit the disposition of these bills in advance of the frantic late stages of the session. In addition Senate Rule 40, usually more honored in the breach than in the observance, literally requires that all local bills be introduced by April 1st. A new departure was made by the 1965 Assembly in an effort to devise a more workable cut-off date for introduction of local bills. This took the form of a joint resolution prohibiting local bill introductions after May 1st in either house, unless the Rules Committee certifies that there is good cause for a later introduction, Resolution 47 (hr. By way of emphasis it instructs the presiding officers to have the resolution read to the House and Senate at the first session of each week until May 1st. Recovery of Government Waste Paper Forgotten Books

Since 2010, a large-scale consolidation policy has been enforced in Palestine motivated by building capacity of small Palestinian local governments and improving service delivery in West Bank rural areas. Theoretical justifications for consolidation anticipate increased efficiency in local government performance based on assumptions of economies of scale resulting from increasing population size of local governments. Arguments against consolidation point to a negative relationship between population size and local democracy and participation. Both theoretical assumptions have not been empirically proven. A large body of literature that investigated outcomes of consolidation has found mixed results for local government efficiency, organisational capacity and democratic government. This thesis uses a mixed method approach to analyse immediate outcomes of Palestinian consolidations against a control sample of non-consolidated units. Due to the unavailability of data on performance prior to consolidation, the methodology included comparative analysis with a sample of consolidations that occurred in the last decade. This thesis argues that internal and external dimensions of local government capacity need to be addressed, particularly financial resources, functional mandate, jurisdictional integrity and democratic government. The thesis had three research hypotheses. Firstly, given the policy objectives, improvements in human and material resources, structure and service were anticipated. Secondly, local democracy and participation was expected to decrease after consolidation due to the decline in the number of councillors, strong traditional ties to local communities and territorial fragmentation of population centres. The third hypothesis was that consolidated LGUs are unlikely to exercise full control over territorial jurisdictions and populations due to geopolitical fragmentation. Findings show that consolidation has mixed results on institutional capacity, negative effects on political representation and democracy and no effect on territorial defragmentation. Outcomes varied significantly between individual LGUs of the same population size. Citizens were most satisfied with improvement in local infrastructure and least satisfied with disruption to social relationships between communities and community representation within elected councils. Results show that post-consolidation capacity is dependent on pre-consolidation capacity of constituencies, state support of consolidation policy, extent of public acceptance of consolidated governments and other reform policies implemented concurrently with consolidation. Public policies focusing on debt reduction and utility reforms have more serious impacts than consolidation on local government resources, functions and sustainability potential. The findings of this study have implications on future local government reform. Structural reforms need to be governed by specific legislation regarding boundary delimitation which provides opportunities for public participation throughout the policy process. Building capacity of local government also necessitates a revision of division of functional roles and fiscal responsibilities between government tiers in addition to resolution of major territorial issues.

Questions of ethics in public administration are increasingly in the news, where commentators seem too often detached from the sources of those ethics and their application to current political conflicts. American Public Service: Constitutional and Ethical Foundations examines public administration ethics as contextualized by constitutional, legal, and political values within the United States. Through case studies, hypothetical examples, and an easy-to-read discussion format, the authors explore what these values mean for specific duties of government managers and for the resolution of many contemporary issues confronting public sector officials. Key Features:

- Describes the philosophical underpinnings of the Constitution and the Bill of Rights
- Identifies the values that anchor and define what government and public administrators should do.
- Indicates where these values fit into a framework for moral decision-making in the public sector, and how they apply to discussions of current controversies in public administration.
- Written by authors with rich experience as both lawyers and academics in public administration programs.

Excerpt from Indian Educational Policy: Being a Resolution Issued by the Governor General in Council, on the 11th March 1904 Education in India, in the modern sense of the word, may be said to date from the year 1854, when the Court of Directors, in a memorable despatch, definitely accepted the systematic promotion of general education as one of the duties of the State, and emphatically declared that the type of education which they desired to see extended in India was that which had for its object the diffusion of the arts, science, philosophy, and literature of Europe; in short, of European knowledge. 2. The acceptance of this duty was an important departure in policy. The advent of British rule found in India systems of education of great antiquity existing among both Hindus and Muhammadans, in each case closely bound up with their religious institutions. To give and to receive instruction was enjoined by the sacred books of the Brahmans, and one of the commentaries on the Rig Veda lays down in minute detail the routine to be followed in committing a text-book to memory. S. 1224--The Administrative Dispute Resolution Act of 1995 narrates the hearing before the Committee of Government Affairs of the United States Senate deliberating upon the usefulness of alternative dispute resolution for government agencies. On the face of it, the contents of this work might seem specific to the participants in question yet a cursory look through the pages will show that the subject at hand is of universal appeal as dispute resolution is one of the most important components in any contractual agreement. Discussions within this book would go a long way in illustrating an unbiased view of dispute resolution. S. 1224--The Administrative Dispute Resolution Act of 1995 postulates views of all the members present within the Committee in order to decide whether bill numbered S-1224 should be passed or not as it would authorize the Administrative Dispute Resolution Act as permanent. The premise of the discussion is based on the fact that alternative dispute resolution mechanisms are positively favoured in comparison to traditional routes of litigation that are costly, time consuming and have a deteriorating impact on both parties.

This title studies the role of mediation, arbitration and partnering as alternatives to traditional litigation. This book is suited for all readers as the language is sanguine and easy to follow with a plethora of examples and opinions that make it an interesting read. Of immense value to students of law and dispute resolution, S. 1224--The Administrative Dispute Resolution Act of 1995 is one of those evergreen pieces of work that can be referred back to at any point of time.
