Kate Zambreno (born December 30 1977) is an American writer and novelist. She is the author of the novel O Fallen Angel, winner of the "Undoing the Novel—First Book Contest," originally published by Chiasmus Press, as well as the novel Green Girl, published by Harper Perennial.

Wikipedia
In Green Girl, Kate Zambreno manages to do a very difficult thing: she makes an almost ridiculous character compelling. Her novel stars (and I use the term advisedly) a young American woman named Ruth, stumbling through London and alternately loathing and enjoying it.

Kate Zambreno writes these green girls with ethereal beauty and gritty, sweaty reality. Green girls are fragile, hollow. They are trying to fill themselves. The protagonist of Green Girl is Ruth, an American living in London and working for “Horrids” Department Store pushing “Desire” — the perfume of an American pop star.

Kate Zambreno is the author of three previous books—Green Girl, O Fallen Angel, and Heroines. Her new book, Book of Mutter, is a meditation on memory and grief. Composed over the course of 13 years, the book examines the death of the author's mother, adopting elements of memoir, essay, poetry and criticism.

Green Girl - The Barnes & Noble Review

A green girl is a young woman, fresh and inexperienced. A woman "unsifted in such perilous circumstance," who hasn't gathered enough common sense to know the intricate ways of the world. Ruth, the protagonist of Kate Zambreno's third book, which was published originally in 2011 by Emergency Press and re-released this summer by Harper Perennial, is just this sort of young woman.
