'A picture of human life so wonderful, so awful ... so exciting and terrible': this is how the novelist and journalist W M Thackeray described Henry Mayhew's accounts of the lives of the poor in Victorian London. Mayhew wrote his articles, collected together as London Labour and the London Poor (1851), in the decades that Dickens wrote Dombey and Son and Bleak House, and Mayhew's work is every bit as vivid and surprising as a Dickens novel. Instead of simply describing the London ...

Henry Mayhew, founder of Punch magazine, wrote this four-volume sociological classic during the 1850's. If you are at all interested in the Victorian era, in British history, in London, or in urban history in general, this is a must-read. The Penguin version is abridged and is a distillation of the "best" of the multiple-volume set. Henry Mayhew's London Labour and the London Poor - The ...

London Labour and the London Poor is Henry Mayhew's classic investigation into the lives of nineteenth century street traders, who made their living making, finding and selling things on the streets of London. My favourite parts of the book were portraits of individuals based on interviews. All of Mayhew's subjects speak in their own voices.
