Holden Captiva 2006 Car Review | AA New Zealand

Holden Captiva 2006 review More importantly, the compact Captiva is much more Holden than the sadly inadequate Barina, which opened the batting for the General's Korean business plans. This time around, Holden's engineers and designers got to the project table in time for the first course, when the Captiva was little more than a borrowed platform and a vision for a global car.

The Holden Captiva was launched in 2006 as a product of General Motor ' s purchase of Korean-manufacturer Daewoo. It was initially released in two forms: a larger seven-seat version called the “ 7 ” and a smaller “ 5 ” or “ MaXX ” model. The bigger “ 7 ” version is far more common and the type we drove for this review.
