If you have a parent or spouse nearing retirement age, chances are good that at some point you'll be in the market for home health care. Home health aides are considered health care paraprofessionals and must meet state-set training requirements. The handbook is designed for easy reading and loaded with photos and illustrations to reinforce learning. It emphasizes the role of the home health aide as an important part of the patient's care team in a home health or hospice agency. It explains in detail the scope of practice of a home health aide and addresses the rule and regulation that the home health aide must be familiar with.

The book has been specially tailored as a teaching tool for home health aides. The book has two sections, the tutorial section one and the practical hands on section two. The second section is a good aide or good training tool for practical demonstration purposes. For the purpose of understanding only, a home health aide does not have to be a Certified Nurses Aide. As a result this book can be used to train and prepare an individual to function in the capacity of a home health aide. The agency must prepare a set of standardized tests for the aides to ensure that the individual have fully internalized the reaching and training that they have been put through. This book further addresses the rule and regulation (federal and State) that the home health aide must be familiar with. This book is an excellent tool for the home health aide. I strongly encourage all individual who practice and plans to practice as an aide in the home health field to read this book.

It's a common perception that patients who are noncompliant are foolish, disobedient, poorly-educated, psychologically or intellectually impaired, or lacking in financial resources. Yet studies that examine how patients actually behave consistently show that significant noncompliance exists throughout healthcare and is an especially challenging problem. This in-service identifies reasons why patients may fail to comply with their treatment plan and how home health aides can positively influence patients to choose behaviors that promote health and recovery. LESSON OBJECTIVES After completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: Define noncompliance Identify five common reasons why patients fail to be compliant with their treatment plan Discuss ten measures that home health aides can take to influence their patients to be compliant with their treatment plan Contents of this lesson: A clearly written fact sheet A 10-question post-test to measure understanding of the subject matter An answer sheet with a place for the instructor's comments and signature An
