Nursing home residents, mostly frail and near the end of their lives, are housed in a health care sector whose condition has been deemed in crisis by both the popular media and the federal government (Health Care Financing Administration [HCFA], 2000a, 2000b). Although the percentage of aged Americans residing in nursing homes has declined slightly in recent years, rapid aging of the population and especially the growth of the population 85 years and older, means that demand for nursing home ... Nurses in home healthcare find their practice to be autonomous and challenging, giving them many opportunities to put their assessment and teaching skills to use.^{3,4,6} Home healthcare is unique in that nurses and other healthcare professionals can care for patients one-on-one in the comfort of their own homes and in their own communities. These nurses might be the only person who checks in on a patient all week: Many patients have no family or caregiver support.

Home Healthcare Nurse Journal

A home healthcare nurse works closely with patients within their own homes or nursing home environments. This includes bathing and feeding patients, along with providing other medical support, such as massage, medication, and wound treatment. Home healthcare nurses work long hours and typically spend most of their time in the home of a patient.

About this journal.
Home Health Care
Management & Practice
(HHCMP) began in 1988
when interest in home
care was renewed.
Since that time, this interest has grown exponentially

worldwide. HHCMP provides a forum for writing about this care in a peer-reviewed journal. This journal is a member of the Committee on Publication Ethics (COPE).

You're not eligible for the home health benefit if you need more than part-time or "intermittent" skilled nursing care. You may leave home for medical treatment or short, infrequent absences for non-medical reasons, like attending religious services. You can still get home health care if you attend adult day care.
