Holt deals with three reasons why children fail. They fail because of fear, boredom, and confusion. For fear of disappointing what Holt calls, "anxious adults", children are afraid to fall below adults high expectations. Many children become bored because much of the curriculum is irrelevant, trivial, and dull.

John Holt's recent book, How Children Fail, speaks largely in support of this tradition, though for the most part it is a finely observed record of just the opposite, that is, of the dreadful failure of our conventional procedures. Holt's material, like Ashton-Warner's, is drawn entirely from classroom events, and he stresses the fact that the schools involved are "good" schools, not poor ones, which is an important point, for he takes pains to show that many successful students, by any ...
