"If you want to know how America's business wars are waged in the trenches, The Force is for you. A gripping book." --Newsday

"SKILLFULLY REPORTED,

INSIGHTFUL...Dorsey lights up our vision of the American salesman with his own sharply reported eyewitness account." --People In this fascinating book, reporter David Dorsey turns a year on the Xerox sales force into an emotionally charged human drama. The Force tracks Fred Thomas and his sales team from the shiny glass office building where work starts at dawn to the rolling green country clubs where they woo customers, from the smoke-filled bars where they unwind to the plush suburban bedrooms where they try to forget the pressures of the day. And as the year unfolds, we get swept up in the burning question at the center of all of their lives: will they make their quota? "Meet Fred Thomas. He's a real person, working in a real job in a real company. And he's the hero of The Force, David Dorsey's brilliant chronicle of life in the real world of contemporary business. Dorsey's book draws a picture that is as intimate as a great novel. It is a book that captures in the most essential details and the most sweeping prose the cross-wired paradoxes that lie at the heart of the New Economy. Fred is Us. He's the next-generation Willie Loman working in a world put into hyperdrive...Fred is the salesman as Everyman." --Harvard Business Review

Television reporter Julie Guthrie is an independent single woman in her early thirties that focused mainly on her career for many years instead of steady dating. Suddenly out of the blue she finds herself hitting it off with two very different kinds of men. One is a local lawyer in a law firm the other is a commercial union welder. Spending time with the two of them that she has so much in common with as far as interests at first is a lot of fun for her. The love triangle becomes more complicated for the TV personality as it continues on. Months after the relationships started Julie discovers she is pregnant, but who is the father? Will it be the soft spoken gentleman or the larger rough and rugged blue collar hard working guy?
