There are also foods (such as tart cherries) that contain low doses of melatonin, a hormone that is important in the regulation of the timing of sleep called the circadian rhythm. However, the melatonin contained within food is so little that you would have to consume a large portion of the food to see any effect.

In this short talk, Arianna Huffington shares a small idea that can awaken much bigger ones: the power of a good night's sleep. Instead of bragging about our sleep deficits, she urges us to shut our eyes and see the big picture: We can sleep our way to increased productivity and happiness -- and smarter decision-making.
