Ever feel swept up in a sea of novelty? When did the new become more important than the true? Andrew Gilchrist found a remedy to today's nausea of novelty in the most familiar elements of narrative and music. He has composed a new arrangement from the ideas of Marshall McLuhan, Northrop Frye, Bernard Lonergan, and Jordan Peterson, weaving together a promising relationship between what we believe and how we live. This book starts a conversation at the crossroads of art, literature, religion, and psychology. And it begins with the oldest of stories. A boy fell in love with a girl and sung her a song. Each chapter in this book charts a series of helpful symbols and sounds, drawing attention to the melodies, rhythms and tempos that make up our most common experiences. The scientific revolution gave birth to a new understanding of the relationship between observer and observed, lover and beloved. That birth has changed the song. However, we have not welcomed this new daughter into the family with a proper name or fully recognized her part in our spiritual development. With her wisdom, we too might find hope and delight in the back and forth journey between tradition and innovation. Could her compelling voice and playful character help us prepare for the greatest roles of our lives?

All these situations are red flags that you need help with your personal boundaries. While we only tend to notice our boundaries when they have been broken, in Better Boundaries, Kari Kwinn explains that they don't actually have to be broken to be better. As Kwinn explains, healthy boundaries are far more than lines in the sand or abstractions discussed in therapy. They are highly personal and dynamic. Though there's no one-size-fits-all rule to balancing your relationships with people, organizations, money, time and the internet, Better Boundaries contains recipes and wisdom for how to renegotiate every area of life so that you can become a fuller version of you. In this book, you'll learn how to: Say yes as in hell yes-and how to say no? Take healthy steps towards compromise? Ask for appropriate help? Skillfully end relationships? Pick your battles (and learn to let shit go)? Turn down the volume on drama and resentment And so much more. As a writer and experienced yoga teacher, Kwinn brings her multifaceted wisdom to any and everyone suffering under the burdens of the modern world-and shows, with a light touch, how to escape those pressures. In Better Boundaries, readers will find the ultimate guide to being better, doing better and feeling better. As Kwinn shows, the boundaries we set with others are always affecting us-even if we're unaware of them. For anyone who wants to put that invisible force to work for them instead of against them, this book is the perfect place to start.

In his "Blue Fairy-Book" Mr. Andrew Lang did not exhaust the fairy treasury, and in this companion volume he has collected many attractive tales. They are mainly from Madame d'Aulnoy and other French sources, the Norse and the unfailing German. Mr. Lang has condensed the story of "Sigurd" from William Morris' version of the "Volsunga Saga." The "Twelve Dancing Princesses," the "Death of Koschei the Deathless," the "Master Thief," "Kari Woodengown," "Dapplegrim," "Minnikin," and "Rapunzel" are among the less familiar tales here. This book is fully illustrated and annotated with a rare extensive biographical sketch of the author, Andrew Lang, written by Sir Edmund Gosse, CB, a contemporary poet and writer. Deep in the heart of Appalachian coal country, Hartstown also suffers more than its fair share of tragedy. Beth Azen discovers a strange ability that leads her deep into the ancient mysteries of the mountains around her. Mark Hersch finds more than he ever imagined on his lifelong quest to heal the damage left by decades of mining. Together, they discover the deadly nature of true loneliness. A gripping tale of sorrow and redemption. Inspired by Far Southwest Virginia: A Postcard and Photographic Journey, also from Spiral Publishing. An excerpt from Songs in the Mountains: "Can you hear me?" Beth whispered, her cheeks turning red. She tried again, a bit louder. "Hello? I hear you talking. Is anyone there?" The song continued without even a pause. Beth scrubbed her fingers through her hair, then got as close to shouting as she dared in the closed space with people right outside the door. "Either tell me what you want or leave me alone!" The voices stopped. Beth tried to hold perfectly still, not sure if she wanted an answer or for the whole thing to be over. She could probably adjust to not having music anymore, but not to the constant noise. The low, empty circuit hum in her ears intensified, and a voice floated up like a distant station on her great-uncle's old tube radio. "Been wonderin' if anyone was there." The woman spoke with a thick dialect that was hard to understand, but Beth thought it had to be from close by. "Been tryin' to get through for a powerful long time." Beth opened her mouth twice before any words made it out.

Blood Curry By John Irvine is a top-notch collection of is timeless poetry. It is a collection of sophisticated horror. John had been in a number of writer's groups since around 2000, had submitted to many anthologies and magazines dedicated to the horror genre. With moderate success, but one day after a number of red wines John felt driven to produce a collection of just his own work. John states: "Let me say that I really enjoy writing horror and its derivatives, as one can be or do anything the imagination comes up with and suffer no jail time. Be a murderer, an alien, a worm, even a politician doing dastardly things with no fear of retribution. Horror is fun." John began to collect writings from past years, so far unpublished, and wrote a lot of new ones. I had also decided to have the book illustrated and a number of arty friends around the globe helped out. Then he had an epiphany... why not include recipes? Genuine ones. People thought he was crazy, but he sourced dozens of recipes that did fit the genre, all of which had one ingredient in common... that's right, blood!
