Best Book of 2020, National Law Journal The inspiring and previously untold history of the women considered—but not selected—for the US Supreme Court In 1981, Sandra Day O'Connor became the first female justice on the United States Supreme Court after centuries of male appointments, a watershed moment in the long struggle for gender equality. Yet few know about the remarkable women considered in the decades before her triumph. Shortlisted tells the overlooked stories of nine extraordinary women—a cohort large enough to seat the entire Supreme Court—who appeared on presidential lists dating back to the 1930s. Florence Allen, the first female judge on the highest court in Ohio, was named repeatedly in those early years. Eight more followed, including Amalya Kearse, a federal appellate judge who was the first African American woman viewed as a potential Supreme Court nominee. Award-winning scholars Renee Knake Jefferson and Hannah Brenner Johnson cleverly weave together long-forgotten materials from presidential libraries and private archives to reveal the professional and personal lives of these accomplished women. In addition to filling a notable historical gap, the book exposes the tragedy of the shortlist. Listing and bypassing qualified female candidates creates a false appearance of diversity that preserves the status quo, a fate all too familiar for women, especially minorities. Shortlisted offers a roadmap to combat enduring bias and discrimination. It is a must-read for those seeking positions of power as well as for the powerful who select them in the legal profession and beyond.

Benny J. and the Horrible Halloween: A Story of Bravery & Little Triumphs!
Some Things Aren't As Bad
As We Think in Our Heads
- Keep Reading! "Everyone is excited about the Halloween parade.

Everyone, that is, except for last but not least, he hates me. I am not going!" Benny J. is unlike most children. Benny J. is worried... and he doesn't like Halloween! He doesn't like Halloween because he doesn't like it when other people stare at him. What if they laugh at his costume? He also doesn't like that he won't recognize his teacher and friends. What if he won't know anyone at school? He particularly dislikes that everything can get TOO loud. What if he gets overwhelmed? Don't even get him started on the Halloween parade ruining their class schedule! And, not being able to find his parents during the parade. What if they get lost? But what Benny J. doesn't know is that Halloween can also be pretty exciting... if only he gives it a chance! Will Benny J. be brave enough to join the Halloween parade at school? Or will he stay at home and not attend at all? Find out for yourself in "Benny J. and the Horrible Halloween", beautifully written and illustrated by Sivan Hong. In this powerful short story about bravery and curiosity, young learners will: Indulge in their sense of wonder, as they overcome their fears and give Halloween a bit of a go - who knows, they might just enjoy it!

Cultivate a strong sense of curiosity for things that are outside their comfort zones - indeed, exciting things come for those who pursue it! And so much more! The seemingly small things in life can feel overwhelming for little kids... but with "Benny J. and the Horrible Halloween", they might just change their minds! The Norton Anthology of American Literature

Gallopade International This book is ideal for teaching subjects related to marketing, management, entrepreneurship, and business ethics. It can be used as the tool to teach students/trainers in advanced undergraduate and MBA/MSc classes. It is widely acknowledged that, only theoretical discussion does not provide the comprehensive understanding about the business decisions that are taken by the managers and/or other parties involved. And thus, use of cases are common in business studies which not only provides students understanding about the practical aspects of the concepts that are being taught in textbooks, but also it introduces students with several aspects of the real-life dilemma, complexities and challenges while working in a business environment. This book contains teaching notes of the book titled A Handbook of Malaysian

Cases: Contemporary Issues in Marketing & Management in which eleven local cases were presented. The teaching notes serve as a guide for instructors who intend to utilize these cases in their classes. Each teaching note includes a brief synopsis of the case, learning objectives, the case's target audience, information about the case leading strategies, relevant concepts/subjects, suggested assignment questions, and their corresponding suggested	answers. In this way, the instructors will have greater understanding about the use and applicability of the said eleven cases. It is hoped that university lecturers, practitioners, and students who are undertaking courses in business studies will benefit from this book.
