It's your job to be an advocate for your users, and that starts with approaching user interviews with an open heart, and an open mind. Treat your interviews as guided conversations. At the end of the day, be nice, be grateful, and thank your participants for taking the time to help you further your understanding.

The user does not have to really like you, think you're funny, or want to invite you out for a cup of coffee in order to trust you enough to be interviewed. Prepare questions before the interview. While you will likely think of questions while sitting with the user, do bring to the interview a list of questions you aim to have answered.
