Document Control ISO 9001:2015 Explained - ISO Update

ISO 9001 does not handcuff organizations in dictating specific required procedures. Each organization is free to decide what documents need to be created and controlled. The expectation is that when you make the decision you ensure the document aligns with the nature of the business and any requirements that need to be met.

The terms ‘documented procedure’ and ‘record’ used in ISO 9001:2015 have both been replaced by the term ‘documented information’, which is defined as information required to be controlled and maintained by an organization, as well as the medium on which it is contained.

ISO 9001:2015 document and record control: The new approach

ISO 9001:2015 allows an organization flexibility in the way it chooses to document its quality management system (QMS). This enables each individual organization to determine the correct amount of documented information needed in order to demonstrate the effective planning, operation and control of its processes and the implementation and continual improvement of the effectiveness of its QMS.

requirements: What is mandatory?

In most cases, you will create an ISO 9001 procedure for every process. Many companies write too many procedures when, in fact, they should be documenting these directives as more specific work instructions. When appropriate, create detailed ISO 9001 work instructions for each task that is needed to support each of your procedures. (A good rule of thumb is: if the procedure does not give enough guidance for someone to complete the task, create a work instruction.)
