Substantial epidemics of poliomyelitis were experienced in the Metropolitan Borough of Islington in the three years, 1947, 1949 and 1950, with 22, 62 and 30 confirmed cases respectively. The case rate per 1,000 population at all ages was rather below that for London as a whole in 1947, but in the other years the rates for the borough and the County were very similar.
