First a little KDX model history. In 1983, Kawasaki's KDX175 evolved into the KDX200. It wasn't a totally surprising move, since the AMA class displacement range for off-road racing had been changed to "126-200cc" and Honda had introduced the XR200 in 1979.

2) Ring kawasaki with the engine number. 3) If it's a 95 or newer kdx pipe it might fit. 4) Just have a look around it and make sure the conversion is done properly. This is a good conversion, a nice torquey engine (compared to a 125) in a light, good handling frame and gets rid of the kdx's fat *** seat and tank.

Check with your local dealer for a service manual. Kawasaki never sold the KDX125 in the USA, so most of the people on this site will be unfamiliar with the exact workings of it. The manual will be a big help on the workings of the power valve mechanism.

Kawasaki's major racing push for the KDX 175 came in the form of Team True Sport, a national enduro and ISDT racing team headed by Jack Penton (above). Penton organized the team along the lines of the original Penton motorcycle racing team of the 1970s, and during its two-year existence, Team True Sport enjoyed modest success.
