This selection from Tagore's oeuvre of poetry includes many songs composed by him during the Swadeshi movement and ends with his last poems. The poet recaptures the scenes and incidents of a childhood spent in the midst of one of the most gifted families of India. The old-world Kolkata, with its lumbering hackney carriages, its closed palanquins for ladies, its medley of hawkers, its troupes of itinerant performers and story-tellers, as seen through the vivid imagination of a child-genius, lives before our eyes. This is the unforgettable account of a remarkable child defying all the attempts of his teachers to drag him along prosaic ruts of learning. Poems numbered 114 and 120-130 were translated by miya Chakravarty, his secretary of many years.

Text in English & Bengali. "His large unfocused eyes found me ambling about in the garden. Although he did not speak, he exuded a tremendous aura which made me want to hold him close and probe his silence. I often had the impression that he wore his silence like a chain that bound him to a grief we could never completely reach or even understand. My fleeting memories of the ailing poet grew to an almost obsessive desire to understand his personality through the various objects and manuscripts I collected throughout my life. Nazrul's works have often been taken up for dissertations and scholarly speculations in many books and journals since his death. However, this book is more of a personal approach to understand the towering presence behind an astonishing corpus of one of the most influential Bengali poets of the twentieth century, hence the format of a photo album. My object here is to, primarily, inform the newer, English and Bengali -- reading generation who have seldom had access to such a wealth of material that would inevitably end up shedding more light on his works. If this is realised to some acceptable degree, I would consider myself, finally, satisfied." --
