David E. Hilton earned a bachelor's degree from Howard Payne University in 1998. He wrote Kings of Colorado mostly in his apartment's stairwell just after the birth of his first son. He spends his spare time either writing or training his miniature dachshund to run in the annual Buda Weiner Dog Races. He lives just outside Austin.

David King in Colorado \(CO\) | 131 records found | Whitepages Kings of Colorado is Hilton's first novel, and in many ways, it shows—the prose lacks some polish and sophistication, and he could have done more with Will's adult voice, which narrates the story from 50 years later. But where he excels is his heartbreaking portrayal of innocence lost in the most profound sense.
